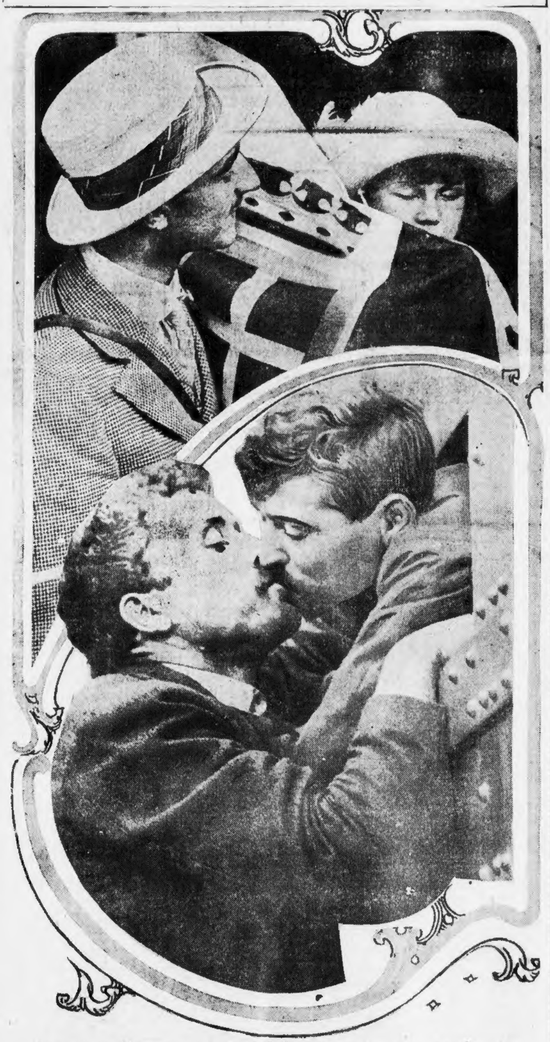
U. S. GETS GERMANY'S ANSWER

500 ITALIAN RESERVISTS LEAVE BOSTON FOR WAR



Among the touching scenes at the South Station today as the Italian reservists were cheered on their way to join the colors, none was more marked than that shown in the picture above, in which Beatrice Mollica is shown kissing the flag of Italy which she presented to her brother, Italo, a volunteer, as a seal of her own and his patriotism and a talisman to keep him from harm. Below is shown a reservist kissing goodbye with a friend who is left behind, according to the custom of their native land.

Five hundred Italian reservists left Boston today on their way to Italy to fight under King Victor Emmanuel. Two special trains carried them from the South Station to New York, where tomorrow they will sail on the La Veloce liner Stampalia for Naples.

The reservists were cheered by a thousand or more men, women and children, who filled the South Station with their shouts of "Viva l'Italia" as they waved American and Italian flags.

In the [illegible] fathers and sisters and brothers and friends. All of them seemed enthusiastically happy.

In the party leaving today was Italo Mollica, a volunteer. He was born in America and is not classed as [illegible]

'Concord Sage' Again Fined by Court

MINNEHAHA AT HALIFAX

STORY OF TRAGEDY RETOLD

By L. V. B. RUCKER,
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

NEW YORK, July 9.—Greatly refreshed by his rest over night and jubilant over the showing he made on the witness stand yesterday when he was under examination by hostile attorneys for five hours, Harry K. Thaw was in better spirits today than he had been since the sanity test proceedings began before Justice Hendrick and a jury.

Only on two occasions during the long cross-examination yesterday by Deputy Attorney-General Cook did Harry come near breaking down. On these occasions he made irrelevant answers, but he quickly recovered his equilibrium, aided by short recesses of the court, and in a calm manner he answered the volley of questions fired at him by the prosecutor.

Thaw seemed to realize that his case will stand or fall by his own testimony. It is his best chance for freedom. He realizes that any break he may make on the witness stand or any excitement he may display may send him back to Matteawan.

CALM AND UNRUFFLED.

And Thaw, who has been noted for his fiery outbursts, passed through the trying ordeal yesterday calm and unruffled at the questions that were fired at him to goad him and sting him in every possible way.

All of the sordid details of the life of Evelyn Nesbit, Stanford White and Thaw himself were brought out by Cook, but through all this rapid firing of questions that must have wrecked his soul, Thaw proved himself the master of the prosecutor.

Before court opened Deputy Attorney-General Cook said that he had ordered W. J. McGuire, the process server who was the warrant of attachment for Evelyn Thaw, to have Dr. A. J. McKibben make another examination of Thaw's wife. Cook said that he believed Mrs. Thaw was really sick and that he would not take any action to have her brought to New Germans Tire of Hostility to U. S.

By International News Service.

BERLIN, July 9.—Political and even naval circles are beginning to tire of the daily editorials in the Deutsche Zeitung against German-American understanding on the submarine question, says an item given out today by the Overseas News Bureau.

The attitude of the Tage Zeitung is considered sufficient proof that such an understanding is desirable.

SANBORN APPEALS FINE

Frank B. Sanborn, the "Sage of Concord" and friend of Emerson, Thoreau and Longfellow, was fined $10 in Concord District Court today for not connecting his private sewer with the Concord town sewer. He appealed and was let go in his own recognizance, to appear at the August term of the Middlesex Superior Court.

Mr. Sanborn, whose appearance in court was a matter of wide interest on account of his long controversy with the authorities about this sewer question, pleaded not guilty to the charge.

Judge Warren H. Atwood of Ayer District sat on this case. Judge Prescott Keyes, the presiding justice of Concord District Court, who had sat at previous hearings on Mr. Sanborn's case, asked Judge Atwood to take the bench for this hearing.

ANNOYED BY DELAY.

Mr. Sanborn said from the first that he would appeal. The government began presenting records. Mr. Sanborn, who offered no opposition to the records as evidence, chafed under the delay.

Finally, in the middle of the reading of one record, Mr. Sanborn rose and started for the door. Police Chief William Craig headed the same way. So did George Albee, close friend of Mr. Sanborn. At the door Mr. Sanborn said:

"I am a very busy man. I have an engagement in Boston. It appears as though I will spend the rest of my life in court defending this action. The clerk has my notice of appeal."

But the venerable defendant was requested to come back to his seat, which he did.

After the hearing, when advised by Judge Atwood to retain counsel to prepare his case for the higher court, Mr. Sanborn remarked that he would probably die before the case was settled.

STATEMENT BY "SAGE."

When Clerk of Court Loughlin called the case by announcing "Commonwealth against Sanborn," Mr. Sanborn stood and said:

"Your Honor, may I make a statement before I make my plea?"

"I had no intention of leaving town to avoid this issue. I wrote letters to the court on this case—one to the present justice and the other to the clerk. I received no reply to either of them.

"The first intimation I had that my letter had been received was when I saw it in the Concord Enterprise. I am not in the habit of corresponding with people who neglect to answer my letters, but allow them to be reprinted in a newspaper."

After the hearing Judge Atwood replied to Sanborn's charge by saying it was not customary for a justice to answer letters concerning cases under consideration, and intimated that the letter which appeared in the paper had been taken from his coat pocket, but at the moment he said:

"I take it, Mr. Sanborn, you intend to plead not guilty."

"I do," said Sanborn.

Munition Ship, With Blaze Out, Safe in Harbor

HALIFAX, N. S., July 9.—The Atlantic Transport steamship Minnehaha for which grave fears had been felt because of the fire aboard her in perilous proximity to thousands of tons of ammunition for the allies, arrived safely here today at noon.

The fire had been extinguished by the crew after a 40-hour fight.

The vessel was not allowed to dock because of the ammunition aboard her, but the Canadian authorities at once started an investigation of the fire while she lay in the stream, in an effort to learn whether the blaze had been caused by a bomb planted by Frank Holt, the Morgan assailant.

The Minnehaha sailed from New York for England Sunday and the fire was discovered Wednesday when she was 570 miles off the Nova Scotian coast.

She turned back to Nova Scotia under full speed, but fog and wind delayed her.

German Domain in Africa Taken Over by British

By International News Service.

PRETORIA, South Africa, July 9.—The British campaign for the conquest of German South Africa has ended in complete victory. All the forces defending the Kaiser's colony have surrendered unconditionally to General Botha, Premier of the Union of South Africa and commander of its military forces. Hostilities have ceased after operations lasting nine months.

German Southwest Africa, which probably will be made a part of the Union of South Africa, has an area of about 422,450 square miles with a coast line of 900 miles on the Atlantic. Its population is estimated at more than 225,000.

The captured territory contains the port of Angra Pequena, the first colonial possession obtained by the Germans in Africa.

U. S. WILL REMAIN FIRM IN CRISIS

BERLIN, July 9.—Germany's reply to the second American note, protesting against Germany's methods in carrying out the submarine warfare in the waters around the British Isles, was sent to Washington today by James W. Gerard, the American Ambassador to Germany. The reply was delivered to Mr. Gerard by an attache of the Foreign Office last night.

News that the German reply was turned over to Mr. Gerard was given out by an attache of the United States embassy, who said that the work of coding the document and translating it was begun immediately after it was received from the German Foreign Office.

The note was started upon its way to Washington just as soon as this work was finished.

QUESTION HARRY THAW ON KILLING OF WHITE

York until he heard further from the process server and doctor.

When Thaw walked to the witness chair at the opening of court he was smiling and jaunty. He bowed to the jurors and to Justice Hendrick and grinned broadly at Cook.

MOTHER AND SISTER PRESENT.

Mrs. Mary C. Thaw and Mrs. George L. Carnegie were early in court and sat where they could see Thaw plainly.

Dr. Austin Flint, Dr. Carlos McDonald and the State's other alienists also sat where they could watch the witness.

Cook opened the second day's grilling by asking Thaw about his two murder trials.

"Was your plea of not guilty on the ground of insanity entered with your consent?" he asked.

John B. Stanchfield's objection was sustained.

"Do you believe you were insane at the time you killed White?" Cook asked.

"That is not for a layman to say," Thaw answered quickly, while Stanchfield was framing an objection.

The objection was sustained before Thaw could continue his answer.

"Do you believe you ever were insane?"

Objection was sustained.

"I am trying to get at this man's frame of mind," Cook told the court.

JUDGE INTERVENES.

"Mr. Cook," said Justice Hendrick, "there are few sane men who at times have not suspected they themselves were insane. And equally true there are no insane men who do not think they are sane."

"Why did you kill Stanford White?" Cook asked, taking a new tack.

"I do not really know," he said, "except that he wronged Evelyn."

"Where did you spend that day?" asked Cook.

Thaw named several hotels and restaurants.

"Did you carry your pistol all day?"

"Yes, I carried a pistol most of the time."

"Why?"

Thaw repeated his often related story of the alleged threats against him by the Monk Eastman gang. He denied that he believed now or ever had believed that Stanford employed the Monk Eastman gang to attack him.

Cook's attitude toward Thaw was a little more severe than on yesterday. On the other hand, Thaw appeared, if anything, more calm and collected. He answered all questions in a monotone and in the first half hour failed to lose his temper or betray any feeling.

TOOK UP SHOOTING.

Cook next took up the actual shooting of White.

"Where did you dine that night," he asked.

"At the Cafe Martin, with Mrs. Evelyn Thaw and two men."

"What time did you begin to dine?"

Thaw asked permission to consult counsel before answering. He stepped down and whispered to Stanchfield and Abel I. Smith.

"About 8 o'clock," Thaw answered when he remounted the stand.

Cook asked Thaw to relate all that happened on the night he shot White.

"That is difficult," Thaw said. "I do not remember much about that night. Ask me some question and I may remember it all."

Cook then asked him to tell what happened at the Cafe Martin.

Thaw related the same old story about getting a note from Mr. McKim, White's partner, telling of White's presence in the restaurant.

"Did you call White 'The red gorilla'?"

"Certainly not."

"Were you drinking that night?"

"I was."

Thaw could not remember what time he left the restaurant for the Madison Square roof garden. The entire party of four went to the Garden. Thaw had bought the tickets in advance.

"What happened at the roof garden?"

"I can remember a lot of small detail that are of no importance and of no value to you."

Thaw then told a long story of his arrival at the garden and of his having some sort of a dispute about his seats. He finally got seats at one of the tables. He then told of his movements about the garden, how he went about from one part to another, talking with friends and leaving Evelyn at the table.

Thaw's story of his actions in the garden before he shot White was a long rambling one, the same in detail as he told at the White Plains sanity test. Finally he got to the shooting.

"Somebody told me Evelyn wanted me. I was in the gallery. I went down stairs and walked up the aisle leading up to the stage. The curtain had just gone up."

Thaw stopped, apparently lost in thought, perhaps arranging the details of his gruesome narrative in his mind. Throughout he had spoken calmly and deliberately, weighing each word. His story was lucid and concise throughout. The eyes of his mother and sister never left his face during the dramatic recital. The crowd of women in the courtroom craned their necks, cupped their ears and gasped audibly.

"Twenty-five feet ahead of me," Thaw continued, "I saw Mr. White at a table." He paused again. "I walked up and shot him." He finished with a snap of the teeth and an air of finality. There was not an inflection to mar the monotone of the telling.

"Does that answer your question, Mr. Cook?" he asked.

"It does so far, but what did you do next?" Cook asked.

"I saw people crowding forward. I knew it was a long drop from the roof garden to the street below. I feared there would be a panic and people would be hurt. So I 'broke' my pistol and held it up so all might see that all might see I did not intend to shoot any more.

Some men came up, one of them a fireman, I think, and I was arrested. I was allowed to go back and see Mrs. Evelyn Thaw.

"I told her I had shot White."

"What did you mean by that?" Cook demanded.

"I meant this: With White dead she had nothing to fear from further mistreatment and disgrace."

Thaw denied that he ever had characterized his killing of White as an act of Providence.

Thaw then detailed his arrest and his removal to the old Tenderloin police station.

Thaw was asked again about his transactions with Mrs. Susan A. Merrill. He produced a memorandum which he said was an exact account of all the money Clifford W. Hartridge ever paid to the Merrill woman, less than $1,000 in all.

"Mrs. Merrill lied," Thaw said. "She named girls who never before were heard of in this world, and have never been heard of since she testified."

Thaw had on his lap a blue-bound book which he handed over to Cook. It was called "Hartridge's dream," and was written by Thaw, he said, in 1912 and 1913. It set forth Thaw's version of his and his mother's financial transactions with Hartridge while he was a Thaw attorney.

EXAMEINED ON BOOK.

Thaw was examined at great length on the contents of the book, but denied that Hartridge paid money to girls through Mrs. Merrill to keep them away from hist rial.

Cook asked Thaw how much money he had given Susan Merrill.

"Perhaps more than $300, but less than $500," Thaw said.

"Your wife told you about Stanford White in Paris in 1903, did she not?"

"Yes."

"And you killed White June 25, 1906. Why did you let three years elapse before killing White?"

"I do not know of any specific reason why I waited."

"When you were taken to the station house, did you hear little girls screaming as if they were being beaten?"

"I did," Thaw answered and as Cook smiled triumphantly he cried: "Hold on. You have got to let me finish my answer. I did hear a little girl cream. There were many girls in the detention room upstairs. Most of them were women of the street. I heard one young girl crying and then I heard a street woman bellow: 'Haw! Haw. She's innocent.'

"That is what I asked the policeman about."

Cook then asked Thaw about his various attorneys, how he met them and when he retained them.

Cook then produced a lot of letters and papers and asked Thaw to identify them. Before Stanchfield would consent to Thaw being examined about them he insisted on seeing them and there was considerable delay.

EATON TELLS HOW HIS WIFE SLAPPED AND ABUSED HIM

Charles S. Eaton, owner of Thompson's Spa, who is suing his wife, Ella F. Bartlett Eaton, for divorce, in answer to interrogatories filed in the Superior Court of Essex County, gives details of the cruel and abusive treatment, which he alleges his wife accorded him.

He tells how his wife slapped his face, made him sleep outdoors, slurred his business and his sons and made him spend money freely.

His answers were filed twenty-four hours after Mrs. Eaton had asked the court to grant her $10,000 to bring witnesses to Massachusetts so she could fight the divorce proceedings.

Some of his answers read as follows:

"On the day following our marriage, which took place in July, 1909, Mrs. Eaton made remarks ridiculing my business, and indicating that she was ashamed of it. Constantly thereafter she spoke slurringly of it. She endeavored to prevent people from ascertaining the character of my business.

RIDICULED BUSINESS.

"Her ridicule of a business, in the success of which I felt reasonable pride, was a source of annoyance and humiliation.

"Very soon after our marriage Mrs. Eaton's treatment of my two older sons indicated very clearly a want of affection for them, and at times a displeasure with my affection for them. As a result they absented themselves from home whenever they could.

"After my marriage none of my children ever spent their vacations at home, except in the case of my youngest son, who spent the first Summer with us.

"Her action and language toward my sons in my presence was almost unbearable. She nagged and scolded them constantly, and, as it seemed to me, very unfairly and unjustly.

BEGAN TO SPEND MONEY.

"Immediately upon our marriage she commenced making expenditures for herself and household upon a scale very largely in excess of that which had been my habit, and commenced contracting very large bills on credit.

"My own expenditures for living expenses and gifts to Mrs. Eaton had been brought up to the rate of about $80,000 per annum. A substantial part of this expenditure was made up of gifts to her or the payment of bills contracted by her for her own gratification.

SOME OF CHARGES IN EATON DIVORCE

Mrs. Eaton's ridicule of my business, in the success of which I felt reasonable pride, was a source of annoyance and humiliation.

My own expenditures for living and gifts for Mrs. Eaton were brought up to about the rate of $80,000 per annum.

In May, 1911, she struck me in the face and broke my glasses. Her nagging conversation lasted all night.

While playing golf she said to the caddy and her brother-in-law, "Don't talk. It makes the old fool nervous."

She would nag me and scold me angrily.

When I was sick she forced me to sleep on a porch out of doors.

As the result of her speech I frequently could not restrain from tears.

"In the Autumn of 1911, the year following one of the distressing scenes of criticism in relation to the gifts to my sons, while abroad, I purchased for Mrs. Eaton a gift of a pearl necklace at a cost of nearly $25,000.

"Mrs. Eaton's attitude and requirements were that whatever money was spent should be practically for her benefit and enjoyment, and that such expenditures should be lavish and of a standard quite beyond any expenditures which I had ever made before my marriage to her.

SPENT $170,000 ON HOUSE.

"In 1912 and 1913 I was expending at her urgent request, about $170,000 in building and furnishing a house in Pasadena, Cal., solely for her gratification.

"In May, 1911, Mrs. Eaton struck me in the face and broke my glasses. Her nagging conversation lasted, at intervals, during the entire night, and I cannot remember that I slept at all. In the morning I was in a state of exhaustion, both nervous and physical.

"Again in April, 1912, Mrs. Eaton struck me in the face, breaking my glasses and cutting my face with the fragments of glass, followed upon a similar night's conversation by Mrs. Eaton. Mrs. Eaton kept me awake nearly the whole night, nagging me.

After this sleepless night, I spent my day in Boston at my business, and returned to my home at Marblehead. She immediately resumed the conversation of the night before in a loud voice, using ridicule, sarcasm, sneering and epithets.

THREW BAG ACROSS ROOM.

"Thereupon, in view of my nervously and physically exhausted condition, I started to pack my travelling bag, feeling that my limit of endurance had been reached. I was interrupted in this by Mrs Eaton's taking the bag, hurling it across the room, and tipping practically everything out of it in disorder and confusion. As I tried to regain the bag to pack it, she clinched me. As I pushed her away, she struck me in the face and broke my glasses, so that my face was cut by the fragments.

"In the later part of August, 1913, I had come to be in a state of nervous depression and exhaustion. I was also made aware that I was suffering from a disorder of my heart for which rest, quiet and freedom from anxiety were absolutely necessary.

"On the contrary, however, the character fo Mrs. Eaton's conduct and language toward me did not change. Neither the intensity nor the bitterness of her reproaches abated. Her action, conduct and speech indicated that she believed, or at least pretended to believe, that I was not really ill and did not need the care or attention that the doctors advised.

CALLED HIM OLD FOOL.

"In August or September, 1913, when I was playing golf with her, accompanied by Mr. Taylor (her brother-in-law) and George Beckman, who was caddying for me, she said, 'Sh! Sh! Don't talk, Harry! It makes the old fool nervous to have anyone talk when he is putting.'

"She would nag and scold me angrily. On these occasions I would beg her not to talk to me but let me rest and have a little peace and quiet.

"Mrs. Eaton in a very angry way said that I had no business to give money to my son; he had all he deserved and all he needed; if I had any money to give away, my first duty was to give it to her; she was a woman and had to be supported; my sons were men, who could support themselves.

WOULD DROWN HIM OUT.

"Each time I tried to speak in defence of my action, Mrs. Eaton would interrupt and drown my voice by talking louder, reiterating her statements.

"At last I told her that I could stand it no longer; that I had not the strength to endure such a tirade; that if she did not stop her abuse of me I should be obliged to leave the car and take the train home. To this, Mrs. Eaton replied that I could do as I damned pleased about that, but she was going to say what she had to say and I had to hear it.

"We went to California in 1913. During my stay there when first I was ill, my attending physician advised that I should ride out about an hour each afternoon. On these rides, when I would express a wish to go over a road that would be easy for me, Mrs. Eaton insisted that other routes, and those disliked by me, should be used.

TOOK ROUGH ROADS.

"As the roads she chose were rough, the rides harmed rather than benefited me, and I returned from the trips more tired, instead of refreshed, largely by reason of Mrs. Eaton's nagging conversation, which was almost constant.

"Finally, about the first of January, I collapsed on account of a heart attack, and thereafter was ill continuously until I left Pasadena, early in May. Mrs. Eaton's action during that time and her language indicated that she did not and would not regard me as seriously ill.

"She described my condition as being a little nervous and fussy about myself. She in no way suspended or abated her social activities. She was out evenings at least one-half the time, to dinners, parties, balls, dances, theatres, opera, and during the day at luncheons, teas, theatres, concerts, etc.

FORCED OUT OF DOORS.

"Among other things, before I was confined to my bed, she insisted that she would make me sleep on the porch out of doors, as that would be good for me, and she did not propose to have the rooms in the house cluttered up on account of my fancied sickness, because she wanted the rooms in order so that she could show them to her friends when they came in.

"On very many occasions during this illness (as well as prior thereto) and almost constantly in her conversation with me, Mrs. Eaton berated me in an annoying and irritating manner so that I became very much excited. At other times she would use sarcasm and ridicule, which had the same result. Her manner of speaking was at times threatening and at other times sneering.

"As a result of her speech and action in my then weakened, nervous condition, I frequently could not restrain myself from tears, and usually when she left me after these talks I found myself in a reeking perspiration."

EDIZIONE ITALIANA
BOSTON AMERICAN

VOL. 1. BOSTON, 9 LUGLIO, 1915. NO. 15.

La presa di Pedgora. Il blocco delle coste austriache dell'Adriatico.

Sconfitte Nostre Dicono a Vienna

VIENNA, 9 luglio.—Secondo il bollettino austriaco numerosi, attacchi della fanteria italiana, sostenutida terribile fuoco di artiglieria, sono stati respinti. Le perdite italiane sono state gravissime.

Ecco il testo o del communicato austriaco:

Negli ultimi combattimenti in Gorizia, il nemico comincio' la sua azione il 5 luglio con un fuoco nutritissimo di artiglieria, seguito do attachi di fanteria. Tutti questi attacchi furono respinti. Uno di questi attachi contro il ponte che va a Lucinino fu pure respinto e nessun successo ebbero quelli contro Ked ipulia. Noi contammo 250 italiani caduti avantile nostre trincee.

CHIASSO, 8 luglio.—Dopo una violentissima battaglia, durata tutto il giorno, le truppe italiane han conquistate Pedgora, sobborgo di Goritzia, che comanda il ponte ferroviario sull'Isonzo.

Sulle creste del monte Calvario gli Austriaci avevano costruito una serie di trincee e reticolati, rafforzando i dintorni con ogni specie di fortificazione. La montagna era stata fatta una vera fortezza contro cui invano si scagliavano le truppe italiane. Altri attacchi della fanteria furono preceduti da un fuoco nutritissimo di artiglieria che duro' tutto il pomeriggio.

La fanteria entro' pure in azione. Si venne ad una lotta disperata, corpo a corpo, da mezzogiorno sino a sera.

La resistenza austriaca si affievoli difronte alla furia e al coraggio dei soldati italiani, e prima che si facesse notte gli Austriaci cominciarono a fuggire lasciando numerosi prigionieri e morti.

L'occupazione di Pedgora e' importantissima per le future operazioni contro Goritza.

La squadra italiana ha iniziato il blocco delle coste austriache ed albanesi nell' Adriatico. Comunicazione di cio' e' stata data a tutte le potenze.

117 MARINAI ANNEGATI.

ROMA, 9 luglio—Secondo il rapporta del Ministro della Marina italiana, colla corazzata Amalfi, che fu silurata nell'Adriatico da un sottomarino austriaco, perirono 117 marnai. Le altre navi italiane, che corsero in soccorso dell' Amalfi, salvarono 567 oumini.

Forze del Nord Sulle Alpi

ROMA, 9 luglio.—Numerosi rinforzi austriaci arrivano sulle linne di combattimento attorno a Gorizia, Monfalcone ed Idria. Tali truppe sono state retirate dalla Galizia e dall'esercito contro la Serbia, una gran quantita' di artiglieria per resistere all'avanzaya italiana sull'Isonzo.

Un dispassio da Bologna, dove si trova il Comando Italiano, asserisce che gli Alpini presero prigionieri due compagnie di soldati slavi. Gli Alpini, sulle Carniche, avanzano sempre a dispetto degli ostacoli immensi che debbono superare.

Large Demand for N. E. Rum in Darkest Africa

Almost enough rum to fill the frogpond on the Common, will leave Boston in a few days for Africa, in the hold of the steamer Estelle Kreiger, which has practically finished loading at Constitution wharf. The ship is taking out nearly 300,000 gallons, consisting of 900 puncheons, 3,000 kegs and 300 barrels.

The demand for rum in the dark continent during the past few months has been unprecedented. The Kreiger is also carrying 2,000 barrels of flour, 650 tierces of tobacco, 250,000 feet of lumber, and a quantity of miscellaneous freight.

Two other vessels which left port with rum were the Charles Whittemore, which sailed June 12, and the schooner Orleans which sailed April 22. The three vessels will land nearly 700,000 gallons of the fluid at ports along the west coast of Africa.

General Gouraud Loses Right Arm

RUSSIAN ARMY IN PURSUIT OF AUSTRIANS

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY,
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

PETROGRAD, July 9.—Austrian troops are retreating from the Lublin district of Poland toward Galicia.

The Russians are pressing forward in pursuit.

Another Germanic campaign for the capture of Warsaw has failed.

These are the three outstanding features in the latest official news from the front received here today.

Reinforced by fresh troops and provided with ammunition which they sorely lacked in Galicia, the Russians are now on the offensive.

While the Petrograd military critics expect more heavy fighting on the Vistula and Bug Rivers before the soil of Poland is cleared of the Austrian invaders, they see in the sudden counter-thrust of the Russians another evidence of the strategic ability of Grand Duke Nicholas, who for the time has blasted the hopes of the Austrian and German general staffs.

Because of the information sent from London that large German forces have been withdrawn from the eastern front, it is expected that the Russian armies will now take the offensive along the entire front. This is the plan that has been followed in the past, the Russians assailing the Teutons in the east every time the Kaiser launched an offensive in the west.

War Firm Employe Poisoned by Mail

By International News Service.

CLEVELAND, July 9.—Letters said to have contained germs of typhus fever and a poisonous powder have been turned over to the postoffice department by officials of the Cleveland Automatic Machine Company.

They were the climax of a series of threatening messages the firm has received since the publication of an article describing a machine for the manufacture of poison bombs.

Herbert M. Rich, secretary-treasurer of the company, would not deny that a girl employee had been seriously affected by powder in the last letter opened.

This caused Rich immediately to notify government officials.

Charge English Fired On Ship in Neutral Waters

By International News Service.

BERLIN, July 9.—By wireless.—That English war vessels had attacked the German steamer Pallas in neutral Norwegian waters and that Norway had protested to England is the assertion made in an official statement issued at the Admiralty today. The statement follows:

"According to latest reports the German steamship Pallas of Flensburg was attacked in Norwegian territorial waters by an armed English trawler, which fired twice at the steamship.

The British auxiliary cruiser Victoria assisted in this violation of neutral rights until a Norwegian guardship which had arrived freed eleven men who had been seized by the British ships contrary to the law of nations.

The Norwegian government has protested in London against this outrageous violation of the rights of a neutral government.

The Pallas is a steamer of 2,052 tons under command of Captain Dittmer.

MRS. MEAD RAPS GARDNER AND ROOSEVELT

War has been declared by the Woman's Peace Party against the advocates of greater preparedness.

At a meeting of the party Mrs. Lucia Ames Mead, wife of Edwin D. Mead, a leading peace advocate threw down the gauntlet, to the exponents of military security.

Congressman Gardner and former President Roosevelt, she referred to as "so-called experts." She criticised their views on our national position and said they do not know what they are talking about.

For the young men attending the government military training camp at Plattsburg, New York, she said "there is no hope."

Mrs. Mead said: "Business men are the most timid things on earth except rabbits. Roosevelt is careless in what he says and his arguments are full of fallacies."

Someone from the floor asked her who was behind the "League of Women for American Neutrality." She declined to discuss this topic, saying, "I would rather talk on the League to Enforce Peace."

Mrs. Mead declared there is no chance of the United States being atacked by Japan, Germany or any other nation.

A BUSINESS MAN MAKES STATEMENT

John F. Reilly, Who Lives at 298 Main St., Franklin, Is Feeling Fine.

Nearly every form of disease begins in the stomach and this has been proven in thousands of cases. It is the neglect of the first symptoms of a run-down system causing these troubles.

People who are nervous and irritable, who lack energy and ambition, feel blue and discouraged, suffer from headaches, dizziness, backache, weak memory, bad blood circulation and unsound sleep should take heed in time, for these are never failing signs of a deranged stomach. The new herbal system tonic, Plant Juice, is designed to meet just such a contingency; it acts directly on the stomach, causing the food to digest perfectly, thereby relieving the suffering immediately, and if taken a short time the results will be permanent.

Local testimonials are received daily in substantiation of this statement. One of the latest is that of Mr. John F. Reilly, who lives at No. 298 Main Street, Franklin, Mass. Mr. Reilly has lived in Franklin for 25 years and is a well known business man in Boston, being the owner of a local express line for the last 10 years. He stated:

"I had stomach trouble, indigestion, dyspepsia for years, and I was so badly afflicted that I would throw up my food after eating. I also had headaches, dizzy spells, belching of gas and fermentation of food in my stomach. About three weeks ago I had a dizzy spell and things seemed black to me, and I had to hold on to the counter to keep from falling. I was troubled with constipation and my liver was affected. I have taken Plant Juice for only a week and I can say that I am feeling fine; my food agrees with me, no more aches or pains, no bloating or gas belching, and the dizzy spells are all gone. I can certainly recommend Plant Juice to any one."

The Plant Juice man is at the Liggett's Drug Store, corner of Washington and Avon Streets, where he daily meets the local public and introduces and explains this remedy. —Advertisement.

CLAIMS MORMONS FORBID POLYGAMY

OGDEN, Utah, July 9.—President Joseph F. Smith of the Mormon Church, and Senator Reed Smoot testified in the suit of Mrs. Margaret Geddes to establish heirship for her sixteen-year-old son, Albert, in the estate of the late millionaire, David Eccles. President Smith was questioned as to the practice of polygamy within the church.

It had been testified by other witnesses that David Eccles, with two wives living, was married to Margaret Geddes in August, 1898, by Apostle M. W. Merrill, eight years after the head of the Mormon Church had issued what is known as the Woodruff Manifesto, prohibiting plural marriages.

The Mormon leader said no authority was delegated to an officer of the church, lay members or others, to perform plural marriages since the time of the manifesto and that the church had not countenanced any such marriages. The president stated, however, that he was sorry to say that such marriage ceremonies had been performed, notwithstanding the prohibition, but all offenders had been disciplined by the church authorities and many had been excommunicated.

Senator Smoot was called upon to answer only two questions, propounded by the attorney for the defendants and they were respecting the testimony of Mrs Margaret Geddes in Washington, December 13, 1894, before the committee on privileges and elections, investigating the Senator's right to a seat in the Senate. He said that at the time he heard Mrs. Geddes decline to answer a question as to who was the father of her youngest child, and that he also heard her deny that "Eccles" was the father.

ADRIATIC SAFE AT DOCK IN LIVERPOOL

By JOHN C. FOSTER,
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

LONDON, July 9.—The White Star liner Adriatic, for whose safety fears had been felt as the result of rumors in the United States that the Germans had marked her for destruction, arrived at Liverpool late last night, having passed safely through the war zone waters, and docked early today.

Passengers on the ship said that the trip was without incident, although all possible precautions had been taken in case of attack by a German submarine. When the ship entered the war zone the lifeboats were swung outward and the crew put through life-saving drills.

Sir Robert Borden, premier of Canada, who was a passenger, hurried to London as soon as the ship docked and will hold conferences with War Secretary Lord Kitchener, and other members of the government relative to the acceleration of the production of war munitions in Canada.

KAISER RUSHES BIG FORCES TO THE WEST

By HERBERT TEMPLE.

LONDON, July 9.—All doubt that the Germans had reopened their terrific offensive campaign against the allies in the west was removed today.

Dispatches received from the neutral countries of Switzerland and Holland show that the Kaiser is pouring his legions into the west after helping the Austrians drive back the Russians, and another titanic struggle along the 350-mile front from the North Sea to the Swiss border has begun.

A dispatch received from Zurich Thursday, stating that 2,000 German military trains had crossed the Rhine going west, was borne out today by a message from Geneva saying that 240,000 German troops had been transferred from the eastern to the western front.

An Amsterdam report, declared to be based on advices direct from Berlin, asserts that Field Marshal von Mackensen, who led the German troops in their great Galicia victory, is in command of the reinforcements coming from the East.

That the allies expect a tremendous attack is shown by the renewed activity of their aerial squadrons. A French aeroplane fleet is making daily reconnaissances over Alsace in an attempt to learn where the German blow is to be struck. They have bombarded railroad stations in an attempt to hamper the movement of the enemy's troops.

A British squadron of twenty aeroplanes is scouting over Belgium. These aviators have been far behind the German front and yesterday part of them bombarded the German military base at Bruges. Severe damage was done to the Bruges docks, according to a dispatch from Rotterdam.

While the Germans are aiming their blow at the French, British and Belgian troops, the Austrians are moving in force against the Italians. A dispatch from Geneva states that the Vienna War Office has closed the Swiss frontier along the Tyrol while troops are being sent to the Italian front.

Gerard Cables Germany's Answer

Berlin Reply to United States Forwarded to Washington by Ambassador.

New Crisis Precipitated by the Kaiser's Refusal to Meet U. S. Position.

GERARD FORECAST OF GERMAN NOTE

Copyright, 1915, International News Service.

WASHINGTON, July 9.—Ambassador Gerard has cabled verbatim parts of the German reply to the second American protest on the Lusitania. The most authentic information is that Germany says:

1—That she has no intention of attacking American vessels or destroying American property.

2—That the United States should prevent the transportation of munitions of war and high explosives on passenger vessels leaving American ports.

3—That Germany should receive assurances that American citizens will not travel on belligerent vessels which carry unreasonable consignments of munitions of war.

4—That Germany should be informed when any American citizens are on such belligerent vessels or any other vessels subject to attack.

5—That the United States should co-operate to have suspected belligerent vessels agree to visitation and search by German submarines without resistance.

6—That it is unreasonable for the United States to undertake to restrict Germany's submarine operations around the British Isles.

7—That the United States violated neutrality in giving clearance to the steamship Armenian, which was loaded at Newport News, Va., with contraband under supervision of officers of the British army.

tenor of Germany's reply to the second note on the sinking of the Cunarder is gaining belief in administration circles.

The outline of the Berlin note is said to be far from satisfactory.

The important features of the Berlin communication are Germany's refusal to recognize the principles of international law as contended for by the United States in the matter of submarine warfare on merchant ships and her failure to admit any liability for the loss of 100 American lives on the Lusitania.

That the United States is to stand firm on its original contention is said to be emphasized by the fact that Ambassador Gerard at Berlin was ordered to make no comment on the tentative draft of the note given him by the German Foreign Office.

INSIST ON WARNING.

Count von Bernstoff, the German ambassador, is in communication by wireless with his government, and is understood to have advised the Berlin Foreign Office that the form in which the proposals had been made did not appear to be acceptable to the United States.

He learned that the position of the Washington government is that there must first be recognition by Germany of the principle that an unarmed and unresisting merchantman must be visited and searched, and passengers and crew removed to a place of safety before the ship is destroyed.

Until there is an agreement on this principle the American government cannot discuss any modus vivendi or temporary arrangement, it is declared.

The German ambassador, it is believed, urged his government to make a broad statement on the principles involved and reserve for later discussion arrangements concerning the separation of passengers and contraband traffic.

The proposals made by Germany that belligerent passenger vessels which do not carry munitions of war shall be safe from attack provided they heed the warnings of submarines and submit to visit and search, is not regarded as of itself objectionable, provided Great Britain and Germany enter into such an agreement.

The American government, it is understood, would be willing to assist in making arrangements for the safe carriage of Americans aboard belligerent passenger vessels which do not carry munitions of war if the arrangements were first made between the belligerents.

Such a method, described in diplomatic usage as a modus vivendi, would not involve any surrender of rights for the future and would be applicable only during a fixed period. For the United States of its own initiative to make concessions, it is held, would emperil the entire fabric of American rights with other belligerents.

The suggestion is contained in the German note that a system of inspection be begun whereby American officials and German consular officers would certify to the character of the vessels carrying departing Americans. This, it is asserted, would also be an unneutral act. The United States has had no official connection with the certification by British consuls of cargoes of goods consigned to neutral countries. These arrangements merely have been entered into by American shipowners themselves to protect their vessels from detentions and delays. It is considered improbable that owners of British vessels would agree to any inspection by German officials or recognize the right of American officers to do other than insure against violation of rules of neutrality.

DENIES LIABILITY.

Irrespective, however, of the suggested in the German reply, one of the chief causes of the pessimism is the treatment to be accorded to the Lusitania tragedy.

Originally the United States pointed out that the German submarine commanders must have misapprehended their instructions and could not have intended to sink the vessel without warning. The last German note in reply contended that the vessel was armed, was an auxiliary cruiser, and therefore could not be treated as a peaceful merchantman.

After the United States submitted official information that the Lusitania not only was unarmed, but did not attempt to resist visit and search, the German government, it is now understood, has taken the position that there was no intention to sacrifice non-combatants, the view of the German commander being that the vessel would be difficult and slow to sink and that there would be ample opportunity to remove passengers to a place of safety. The United States said in its first note that reparation would be sought for the sacrifice of Americans on the Lusitania, but Germany denied liability for the occurrence.

OFFICIALS PUZZLED.

This change of sentiment from the apparently conciliatory attitude of a couple of weeks ago has puzzled administration officials very much. The most plausible theory to account for it is that German officials have once again wholly misinterpreted the sentiment of the American people and have come to believe that Bryan, with his compromise views, is more representative of American sentiment than President Wilson.

That this theory is very likely to be correct is shown by the fact that there is strange similarity between the terms outlined in the German note and the terms on which Bryan was ready to compromise the situation with Dr. Dumba, the Australian ambassador. It will be remembered that Bryan wanted a distinction made between passenger ships and those carrying muntions of war, and urged that American citizens should be officially warned not to travel on vessels of the latter class.

This was in the face of the fact that the American position, as contended for by President Wilson, is that under the recognized rules of international law American citizens have the right to travel anywhere on unarmed merchant ships without regard to what cargo they may be carrying.

But the Bryan view is eventually adopted by the Kaiser's advisers, probably on the assumption that American sentiment will support the Bryan policy rather than that set forth by President Wilson.

Even more surprising is the apparent attitude of the German government regarding the sinking of the Lusitania which aroused the entire American people to the perils to which United States citizens—men, women and children—were exposed by attacks without warning on unarmed merchant ships.

For the sinking of the Lusitania no admission of liability is made. Whether in extenuation or not, the view is expressed in the draft that when torpedoed it was not believed the Lusitania would sink as rapidly as she did.

In some official quarters there is still hope that the refusal of the American ambassador to discuss concessions may convince the German officials of the earnestness of the United States and bring about modification.

There are intimations from Berlin, however, that officials there do not believe the American government will insist on the position it took in its last note and that the public opinion in the United States favored compromising the issue. Some high officials in Berlin, it is said, are of the opinion that public sentiment in the United States on the question of separating passenger and contraband traffic supports Mr. Bryan's views as expressed since his resignation.

This and other phases of the question give the situation an atmosphere of doubt and uncertainty which it has not had since the indications of several days ago that factors were at work in Berlin for a favorable settlement of the controversy.

Germans Have New High-Power Shell

LONDON, July 9.—German artillerists are using a projectile devised by Krupp, which combines the merits of shrapnel and high explosive shells. The head contains a fuse which may be set for either time or percussion ignition, and a charge of high explosive in a thick steel case. Attached to this is a thin steel case containing shrapnel bullets.

Roumanian Makes $20,000,000 Loan

By International News Service.

BUCHAREST, July 9.—The Roumanian government has contracted with the National Bank for a new loan of $20,000,000, which will be secured by 5 per cent. bonds, payable in two years. The recent $40,000,000 loan has been converted from 4 to 3 per cent.

GERMANS ADMIT LOSS OF HILL IN VOSGES

By FREDERICK WERNER.
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

BERLIN, July 9.—By Wireless—French troops have forced the Germans to evacuate Hill No. 631, in the Ban-de-Sapt region of the Vosges, according to today's official report from the general staff. This height was captured by the Germans on June 2. The announcement of its loss indicates that the French are making severe assaults on the north flank of the German salient extending to St. Mihiel.

The Germans have offset the loss of Hill No. 631, however, by taking by storm several lines of French trenches on a front 350 yards wide east of Ailly, which is near St. Mihiel.

The general staff reports the repulse of an attack at Souchezk, but admits that thus far the Germans have been unable to drive the enemy from the trench section lost on Wednesday.

The situation in the eastern and southeastern war theatres is reported unchanged.

AUSTRIA TURNING NORTHERN FORCES AGAINST ITALY

ROME, July 9.—Heavy reinforcements are being sent by the Austrians to the spheres of operations around Gorizia, Tolmino, Montfalcone and Idria. Most of the fresh troops in the southwestern theatre of war were previously engaged against the Russians, although some have been withdrawn from the Serbian zone of hostilities.

The Austrians are also massing great quantities of artillery for future use all along the Isonzo front.

In the Corinthian and Tyrolese Alps severe artillery duels are under way.

A dispatch from Bologna, where general headquarters are located, states that two companies of Slavonians surrendered to the Italian Alpine troops in Carnic. The Alpine forces of the Italians in Carnia are steadily advancing, despite the tremendous obstacles they have to overcome.

FIERCE ITALIAN ONSLAUGHT REPULSED

By International News Service.

VIENNA, July 9.—Infantry attacks, following terrific bombardments, have been launched by the Italians along the front in Gorizia, but these have been repulsed by the Austrians, it was officially announced today. At Redipulia 250 Italian bodies were counted in front of the Austrian trenches. The text of the official report follows:

In the latest fighting in Gorizia the enemy commenced the actions with overwhelming artillery bombardments on July 5, following up with infantry attacks. All these attacks were repulsed. A strong attack against the bridge head at Lucinico was also repulsed.

"The enemy attacked unsuccessfully at Redipulia, notwithstanding a continuous artillery bombardment. We counted 250 corpses lying before our positions. An attack by the Italians against Monte Groston broke down under the fire from the fortress."

There was a Heavenly light in her very face

I think, now that I have seen "The Goddess" I know why Joan of Arc had that mysterious angelic color in her expression. Because her mission—the bigness of it—the realization of the undertaking that was her burden—the nation that was pleading with her to save it—was reflected in her life and expression.

And I think that it is precisely these emotions which inspired Anita—I mean Celestia. (They are now one and the same). As a woman from Heaven her mission is to save the world. And in her costume and with the settings that lend atmosphere to her person, she has gradually come to believe in the spirituality of her character.

Such playing is more than real acting. It is nearer to the attitude of the inspired minister or the beatifying Sister of Mercy.

"GOOD FELLOWS" MOST ALWAYS DIE POOR, SAYS CHAMPION WILLARD

By JESS WILLARD.

(Copyright, 1915, by A. Merritt, All Rights Reserved.)

I RAN across a lot of fighters in and around Los Angeles. Many of the oldtimers live there, and most of the young fellows came drifting through in search of matches.

One man I was glad to meet was Jack Root, as game and as clever a boxer as ever stepped into the ring. It is ten years since he put on a glove, and good business investments have made him a rich man.

When you come right down to it, the fighting game is the best temperance lesson ever preached. Look over the list of topnotchers, and you'll find that they were all sober, clean living fellows. Those that had the sense to stay on the water wagon, and go to bed early, all quit with money, and are rich today.

The chaps that made friends with booze were whipped by second-raters before they quit, and either died in poverty or else they're going around now beginning money from the graps juice bunch.

You can't get away from it, I tell you. The water wagon may not be as jolly to ride on as the booze cart, but it takes you to a home and friends. The booze cart dumps you in the gutter or in a pauper's grave.

Jack Root never drank. When he got through fighting he had a good clear brain, and he took his savings and made money with them. He is just one of a hundred that I could name over if I had the time.

Battling Nelson never took a drink in his life, and I don't suppose a more rugged little rascal ever drew on a glove. Bat saved his money instead of throwing it around in saloons on bums, and he's wealthy today. He likes land, and I hear he owns most of Hegewisch, Illinois.

They called "Billy" Papke a tightwad because he wouldn't buy drinks for every Tom, Dick and Harry. Billy wouldn't buy drinks because he didn't believe in drinking. When he decided to quit the ring, he had about $100,000 saved up, and he started in business in his home town in Illinois.

Look at Packy McFarland. I don't suppose there's a boy in the land that would call Packy a "sissy." Yet he never touched liquor in his life, and never smoked a cigarette. Taken in all, I think that Packy was the greatest boxer I ever saw.

He has married and settled down, and is studying law. I guess he made $150,000 in the ring and he's adding to it by careful investments. They won't have to give any benefits for Packy to keep him out of the poorhouse.

Same way with Leach Cross. They josh Leach about still having the first dollar he ever made. I guess his wife and children are glad of it, even if the bartenders are sorry. Leach is a good dentist, too, and has already built up a fine practice in New York.

They tell a funny story on Leach's father. The old gentleman nearly had a fit when Leach went to him and told him he was going to enter the ring.

"What!" he yelled. "A box fighter? Na-a! Clothing is a beesness. A butcher is a beesness. A grocery is a beesness. But a box fighter—oi, oi—it's a loafing."

I reckon the old man feels better about it now. Boxing has kept his boy sober and strong, and also made him something like $150,000.

That East Side of New York is certainly a place where they ought to teach boxing in the schools. If they taught their kids to be good sports, you wouldn't have any gangs or gunfighters. They'd grow up clean and square boys, not puny little rats who have to dope up on whiskey and cocaine to get the nerve to shoot somebody in the back.

Leach Cross is an example. So's "Gyp the Blood." Which had you rather have in your city, a Leach Cross or a "Gyp the Blood"?

Abe Attell was another Ghetto lad who learned that it paid to keep away from whiskey and cigarettes. But what Able couldn't keep away from was cards. I hear that all his money has gone at poker and the races.

Old John L. Sullivan quit drinking in time enough to make a good deal of money out of vaudeville. He lives on a farm outside Boston, and isn't afraid of the poorhouse.

Tommy Murphy, the clever lightweight who just misses being a champion, is an architect and builder. While other fighters were hanging around saloons, and blowing in their money on loafers, Tommy was salting his earnings away. He has built a lot of houses over in Brooklyn, and when he gets ready to quit he's got money and a good business.

Tommy Ryan was a champion in the days of Sullivan and McAuliffe and George Dixon, three "spenders." After every victory, they'd spend their money like water, and so they had crowds following them all the time, and prasing them for being "sports."

Tommy Ryan wasn't a drinker and he wasn't a sport. He didn't even smoke. So they called him a "cheap skate." But today Tommy Ryan is healthy and wealthy, while other champions who were a hundred times more popular went to their graves in a pauper's hearse.

"None of the sport stuff for me," said Tommy. "I notice that these good fellows usually have to have benefits given them to keep 'em from starving. I'll give my own benefits."

Poor old Bob Fitzsimmons isn't a case of a man who threw his money away, but a man who let it drip through his fingers. I don't know how many thousands Bob made in his day, but I figure that he must have earned close to half a million.

Remember that he fought for twenty long years, and was middleweight champion before he became heavyweight champion. But he had no business sense, and today he claims to be absolutely broke. There's a man I'd be glad to work for in a benefit.

If he's broke it's a misfortune, not his fault. He never drank, and he never dissipated. In a way old Bob was a boy who never grew up. He's as much of a kid today as he was forty years ago.

Ad Wolgast is still boxing in spite of his mushroom hands, but he doesn't have to if he don't want to. Ad is another boy who kept out of saloons and saved his money, and he's worth $100,000 at least.

Jimmy Britt, Tommy Burns and Tom Sharkey are three more fighters who led the simple life, and who now have health and money. Tom Sharkey runs a saloon in New York city. It's a bad business, and the best proof of it is that Tom has too much sense to drink himself.

Did you ever notice that bartenders don't drink? The owner of the saloon would fire them if they did. He's perfectly willing to have men drink that work for other people, but he wants only sober fellows to work for HIM. Can you beat it?

Perhaps the finest living example of what a sober, wholesome life will do for a fighter is "Mike" Donovan. When he began fighting in 1866 at the age of nineteen, he went three hours and fifteen minutes with bare knuckles.

In 1888, when he was forty, he went six rounds with Jack Dempsey, then in the very height of his career. And it was a REAL fight! The Nonpareil had said some ugly things about "Old Mike," and the veteran was determined to make a showing.

For the whole six rounds it was give and take, and at the end the referee gave Donovan the worst of it when he called the bout a draw.

In 1891, when he was forty-three, "Mike" knocked out an old rival in forty-eight seconds. Today, at the age of sixty-seven, he's as hale and hearty as ever, and the owner of more friends than any other man in America.

He fought square. He didn't drink. He lived clean. No benefits for "Mike" Donovan! No begging of money or fear of a pauper's grave!

The whole thing looks so simple to me that I can't help feeling that the fellows who drink and rat around are fools. Whiskey means lost health, lost friends and lost money.

Keeping sober means that you'll live longer and feel better, and home and children and money saved.

Maybe I won't be a very popular champion because they'll never catch me scattering my money in saloons. I don't think I'm stingy, and I hope I'll always be willing to help a friend, but I'm no booze buyer.

I mean to salt down what I earn, so that when I quit I can buy a big farm somewheres, and go in for cattle raising and bumper crops. I want my children to grow up in the open, away from city streets and their saloons. And I'm hoping that by the time they've grown up, we'll have enough women voting to wipe out the liquor traffic entirely.

It never did anybody any good, and its ruined thousands of lives and wrecked thousands of homes.

(Tomorrow Willard will tell how he "acted the baby" once, and what it did to him.)

Here is another exercise to develop the stomach muscles, posed by Jess Willard. He raises himself from the floor to this position and then lowers himself back. He does this a dozen times a day.

Jailer Is Slain; Merchant Held

DOVER, N. H., July 9.—Rodney Merchant, assistant engineer at the Strafford County Jail, was expected to be arraigned here today on a charge of murder, as a result of the death yesterday of Superintendent E. A. Willard of the jail.

Willard was shot in the hip and abdomen. The police say that Merchant was intoxicated when he went to the engine room to begin work. Chief Engineer Howard Hanson reported the assistant's condition to the superintendent. Willard and the latter, it is charged, opened fire as the superintendent entered the doorway.

Mrchant had been employed at the jail for seven months. He had had no trouble with the superintendent. Since he began working at the jail he has twice tried to kill himself.

Willard leaves a widow but no children. He had been superintendent of the jail for for twelve years.

Exchange Non-Combatants.

PARIS, July 9.—France and Germany have agreed to an exchange of non-combatant prisoners.

SAYS SPONGE WAS LEFT IN HER BODY

Mary E. Bisbee says when she recovered from an operation a gauze handkerchief sponge, 14 inches in length, was left within her.

As a result she has entered suit against Lucy L. Des Brisay, proprietor of a private hospital at No. 38 Newbury street, asking the court to award her $15,000 in damages.

In the Bisbee complaint it is stated that the plaintiff was taken ill last October and was taken to the Des Brisay Hospital for treatment. The plaintiff claims a nurse lost count of the gauze sponges used in the operation, so that when the wound commenced to heal one was overlooked and remained within the cavity.

This alleged miscalculation on the part of the nurse, she claims, caused septicemia to set in, and another operation had to be performed to afford her relief.

She claims Miss Des Brisay should have furnished a competent nurse who could count instead of giving her one who she says did not count correctly and who therefore reported to the surgeon in charge that all sponges had been removed from the body.

Guilty as Slayer of Wife's Parents

WOODSTOCK, Vt., July 9.—George Warner of Andover has been found guilty of murdering his wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wiggin of Andover. The couple were shot to death last November.

TROUBLED WITH ACNE TWO YEARS

Face Completely Covered With Blisters. Itched and Burned. Could Not Sleep.

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"I was troubled for over two years with acne on my hands and face. My face was completely covered with blisters of all kinds. It was red and inflamed. The pimples festered and itched and burned. Whenever I scratched my hands or face, the pimples started to bleed and spread over my whole body. I could not sleep nor lie down at all.

"I was told that Cuticura Soap and Ointment would cure me so I wrote for a free sample. The next morning I saw an improvement. My pimples started to dry up and the spots disappeared. I kept this up for two weeks. I used one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment and now my hands and face are well." WHEN you have been relieved you will report yourself at the guard house. You are a prisoner."

"Yes, sir."

Kehr returned to his headquarters and gave orders that all the men then on sentry duty should be relieved, and sent to him. From all he obtained similar confessions to that made by the first sentry. One by one he interviewed every man in his command, and found, to his great relief, that only those on duty at the time when Celestia had made her tour of inspection had been tampered with. These he had locked up. Then he sent for Professor Stilliter.

"She's made a fine beginning," he said. "Give her time and she'd corrupt every man in the post. After that if we were attacked it would be a massacre—of us. Old man Barclay's off his head. I am willing to give her a free rein to settle this strike, according to orders, but I won't have her jeopardize my life, or the lives of those under me."

"Tomorrow," said Stilliter, "she will go among the strikers and pull their teeth. Give her rope—she'll settle all this turmoil out of hand and make everybody love each other."

"Tomorrow," said Kehr, "she will find herself locked in her house."

"I shall consider it my duty to break down the door and let her out."

"Her house will be guarded and you will approach it at your peril."

"I have orders from Barclay—so have you."

"His orders would be different if he was on the spot."

"They would be the same. Restrain Celestia by force, and take the consequences."

"This place," said Kehr, "is under martial law. I shall probably send her away tomorrow. In the meanwhile don't you attempt to interfere."

"I'll telegraph Barclay."

"You will not. You will go to your room and stay there till you are told you may come out."

Stilliter turned angrily on his heel, opened the door of Kehr's office and found himself confronted by two men with rifles.

"Escort Professor Stilliter to his room," said Kehr, "and see that he doesn't leave it without orders from me."

* * * * * * * *

Early the next morning Gunsdorf, Carson, Cracowitz and Tommy Barclay arrived before the gate of the stockade under the protection of a white flag, and were admitted presently, after being blindfolded, to a parley with Kehr.

"Barclay," Gunsdorf explained, "comes on a private matter. He wants to thank the lady who saved his life yesterday. If that isn't possible he wishes permission to go back to his friends in town."

"You others have come on business. Well, I listen to you once more—if I can. Barclay may see the lady."

Tommy was blindfolded once more, and escorted to Celestia's house. He was pushed in, told to take off the bandage over his eyes, and heard the door lock behind him.

He found himself in a plain little sitting room about twelve feet square. Two doors opened from it, but both at the moment were closed. Of Celestia there was neither sight nor sound. Tommy seated himself in a plain deal chair and waited. Half an hour passed. Then he began to call to her, at first softly and then more loudly.

"Celestia—oh, Celestia—where are you? It's Tommy."

Presently he heard himself answered in a sleepy voice.

"What is it? I've just waked up."

"Don't trouble then—later will do. I came to thank you for yesterday, and to ask why you wouldn't speak to me. I couldn't sleep. I had to come."

"I'll come in a little while," said Celestia. "Do you mind waiting?"

After what seemed an eternity to Tommy she came.

"Oh, Celestia," he said, "you hurt me so. Why wouldn't you speak to me?"

"I don't quite know," she said, hesitatingly, "but I will now. Only I don't want to be thanked. I want to forget all about that. We can talk as we go. I am going to talk to the strikers this morning. Already some of the men here feel more peaceful. The main thing is that there mustn't be any blood shed until I have had a chance to make everybody see everything in a true light. You stopped one attack on the stockade. That was fine!"

"It was common sense."

"It was fine! Shall we start now?"

"Have you had breakfast?"

"Some of the strikers will give me a cup of coffee. That's all I need."

She smiled radiantly upon him, and went to the door of the house.

"It's locked."

"Yes, I know."

Celestia raised her voice. "You! Without there! Open the door!"

A stern voice answered her:

"Orders are to keep the door locked and shoot anybody who tries to leave the house."

"That doesn't apply to me."

"It applies to you and to the other prisoner."

"Come around to the window. We can talk better there."

"Orders are not to talk with the prisoners or to look at them, unless they try to come out. Then the orders are to shoot at sight."

"Yes, but just come to the window a moment. I don't think you understand."

There was no answer. She turned swiftly to Tommy.

"What does it mean?"

"This, I think," said Tommy: "Kehr wants the stockade attacked. He is afraid I will prevent the attack and that you will prevent the defence; so he's locked us both up. Gunsdorf and a committee of strikers are with him now. They will make certain unreasonable demands. He will refuse. When they return to the town the attack will begin; and if they don't return to the town by 11 o'clock the attack will begin."

Celestia pondered this for a few minutes. Then she called again.

"Open the door! Open, I say!" but in vain. She turned.

"We'll need all our strength. Have you had breakfast?"

"I couldn't eat till I'd seen you and you'd spoken to me."

Celestia laughed and once more approached the door.

"How about breakfast?" she called.

"Orders are to supply breakfast on demand."

"Can you make it breakfast for two?"

"Certainly."

Ten minutes later the door was opened, a steaming tray was slid along the floor through the opening, and the door was once more closed and locked.

Almost in silence, for they were both very hungry, Celestia and Tommy ate a hearty breakfast.

Once again, as at the Octagon fire, Celestia and Tommy found themselves in agreement. Each was bent upon saving life. Tommy told Celestia of the fighting temper the strikers were in, and Celestia told Tommy of Kehr's preparations for making the defence of the stockade a shambles of those who should attack it.

She told him, too, how she had made a beginning of softening hearts, but seeing that she had been locked up she feared that the softened hearts had owned up to Kehr and been put where they could do no mercy.

(Watch for the next instalment of this wonderful serial in tomorrow's Boston AMERICAN.)

In vain Celestia beat against the door, seeking to escape.

The Supreme Beauty of Serenity

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

CALMNESS is the result of long and patient effort in self-control. It indicates a right understanding of cause and effect and cures all tendency to fuss and fume and worry and grieve. As soon as you have learned to be calm you have attained the wonderful gift of poise and your soul is on its way to steadfast serenity.

The calm soul has learned how to govern itself—and so can adapt itself to others. People reverence and revere those who are masters of themselves. And whether a man remains tranquil and unruffled in emergency and acts with judgment, or be serene and calm in facing the petty annoyances of life, he still gains admiration for the wise sanity that prevents him from wasting himself without self-control or judgment.

It is a sad question whether the most of the unhappy people we meet have not ruined their own lives and marred and defaced their happiness by nothing more unavoidable than a lack of control. If Fate and Circumstance twisted and warped lives out of shape, at least there would be something awe-inspiring and magnificent about the tragedy. But quick tempers, hastily spoken words, rash deeds, irrevocably lead to most of the bitter changes that cut lives off from happiness.

Humanity surges with uncontrolled passion. Life is tumultuous with ungoverned grief. Anxiety and doubt blow us all about and carry some of us upon uncharted reefs. And it is all so unnecessary. To me that is the ultimate bitterness of most tragedy—it need never have happened—we did it ourselves—a little patience and the storm would have passed—but we must fly out to defy the lightning and to be drenched by the rain we stupidly forgot.

Self-control and equanimity would have told us to wait—but a wild impatience of unbalanced emotion drives us all to try to hurry the adjustment of circumstances.

An unhappy and lonely girl once said to me: "I lose all of my friends sooner or later. Some little disagreement arises and instead of waiting stubbornly for it to blow over I write a letter—put my whole soul on paper and still I lose my friends. Why?"

Whoever knew that a letter would be read in the same spirit in which it was written? Whoever, in the grip of emotion, could put into a letter the humility and simple love, proud and unafraid, which they felt? One wrong word—written and imperishably set on memory—and a tiny quarrel grows to the breach of misunderstanding.

The girl who lost her friends through her propensity to write emotional letters probably exaggerated her sorrows to bitter grievances and frightened off her friends by exactions of cloying oversentimentality.

No calm, serene woman would put her whole soul on paper over some "little disagreement." That proceeding presupposes a lack of sweet tranquillity—and an oversupply of excitability of the sort that does not make its possessor "wear well" in any human relation.

Strong, calm people are always loved and revered. A sweet-tempered, well-balanced individual is so COMFORTABLE to know that he or she is sure to win friends and to keep them.

Serenity and tranquillity are the natural dower of some thrice blessed souls, but most of us must work and struggle through effort and failure to attain the mental poise that brings these flowering to life. The best way to go about acquiring them is to cultivate the habit of smiling at small annoyances and of facing big ones with the philosophical attitude of, "Now what can I do about this? Something? Or nothing? If something—then something wise. If nothing—then patience to see how the thing adjusts itself."

Keep your hand on the helm. Steer your boat quietly and as efficiently as possible. Feel that you are your own Sailing Master and can be a splendid one if you choose. 'Ware hidden reefs—and shorten sail in storms. You can make an interesting game of conquering your own flighty and excitable tendencies and of gaining the beauty and poise of an equable temperament.

Difficulties faced calmly slink away. Quarrels analyzed sanely dwindle to nothingness. Failure ignored sinks under the determination to build success on the ruins of previous effort.

Pulling Up Peaches

By DOROTHY DIX

UNDOUBTEDLY the sweet that appeals most to the palate of the man, and without which he feels the feast of life incomplete, is preserved Peaches. Indeed, so insatiable is the masculine appetite for this dainty that many men bankrupt themselves in their efforts to secure an adequate supply.

Happily the supply of Peaches is a large one, and though old men continually tell us that Peaches now are not what they were in their youth, and prophesy that the crop will be blighted, this is invariably found to be a false alarm.

Peaches grow in all parts of the country, each section producing a variety that has some peculiar excellencies of its own and that appeals to the local taste. The largest Peach orchard in the world, however, and that bearing the most beautiful and luscious fruit is situated near the junction of Forty-second street and Broadway. Here are to be found such wonderfully perfect Peaches that people come from long distances just to gaze upon them.

The variety of Peaches is very expensive. It is known scientifically as the Peachus Chorusgirlius, and is intended for show purposes, and not for home consumption, although many men who like to dabble in domestic chemistry have tried to put it up. Unfortunately, the experiment is rarely successful, as the Peaches are sure to sour and never agree with anyone.

In putting up Peaches, the most important thing to consider is the quality of the raw material. Be sure to pick out your Peaches yourself. Do not trust this to anyone else, as there is nothing in which tastes differ more than in this fruit, some men liking large, handsome, showy Peaches while others prefer small ones, while still other men care only for sweet, insipid Peaches, and yet others like them best when they have a tart and acid flavor.

Opinions also differ as to whether it is more desirable for a man to risk his neck climbing up after the Peach that hangs highest on the tree, or to take the dead ripe one that is ready to fall into his mouth.

These are, of course, mere matters of detail, but the man who is about to put up his life supply of Peaches should be very careful of one thing, and that is not to be deceived by a piece of pink mosquito netting into thinking that he is getting a luscious Peach when, in reality, he is getting a lemon. It should also be borne in mind that Peaches are most desirable before the down has been rubbed off. For this reason many men prefer country Peaches to those grown in town in hot-houses, but while the country Peach is undoubtedly fresher it lacks the piquant flavor of the city fruit.

Peaches may be put up in an almost infinite variety of ways. The exotic variety, Peaches Chorusgirlus, to which reference has already been made, is generally put up in champagne. This is a favorite sweetmeat with very young and very old millionaires, and is extremely expensive. You can see it served, however, at the midnight suppers at the fashionable restaurants. It is always garnished lavishly with diamonds and American Beauty roses and wisps of chiffon.

A more wholesome confection, and one better suited for the family table is Preserved Peaches. To make this dish, select a nice fresh, sweet Peach, with the blush of morning and the dew of dawn still on its cheeks. Take it carefully home and handle it very gently, always remembering that it is very tender and easy to bruise.

When serving flavor it with all the sweetest terms of endearment that you can think of, and spice it with delicate attention and flattering compliments.

Be generous in making your sauce of affection so that there will be enough to cover your Peach completely. Simmer gently over the steady fire of faithfulness, and the result will be a Preserved Peach that will keep in any climate.

Preserved Peaches made after this recipe were a great favorite with our grandfathers, who frequently took prizes at the country fair and elsewhere for Preserved Peaches that they had kept fifty years. Unfortunately the art of making this wholesome, everyday sweet appears to have been lost by their descendants, and few men nowadays go to the trouble of preserving their own Peaches. They seem to prefer to get fresh fruit.

Another very common way to put up Peaches is to pickle them. You can make Pickled Peaches out of any kind of Peaches, even the freshest and sweetest Peaches that were intended for preserving, but the hard, acid variety are the easiest to pickle.

To make Pickled Peaches, first rub all of the down of romance and illusion from them with a rough hand. Then slash them with sharp speeches, and bruise them with brutal jests. This makes them so that they pickle very readily.

Then bring to a boil a barrel of the vinegar of temper, into which throw an equal quantity of nagging and neglect. Season it with ridicule, and contempt, and souse your Peach in this mixture until the acid penetrates thoroughly through every part of it. Serve this dish always as an accompaniment to family parties.

Many men seem to have a morbid relish for Pickled Peaches, and have a great knack at making them. This is to be regretted, as Pickled Peaches are extremely indigestible, and the fact that they are served at so many family tables undoubtedly accounts for much of our matrimonial dyspepsia.

Peaches are practically never canned, the task of canning a Peach requiring such superhuman cleverness and strength that few men ever even attempt it.

Our Ugly Ally, the Toad

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

I RAISE a voice for the generally despised toad. The toad is personally, no favorite of mine, but I speak for him under a sense of plain justice, because the facts in his case, officially accumulated by the Department of Agriculture, appear to establish beyond question his right to be treated as a friend and ally of man in the struggle for existence. This being true, the well known and cureless ugliness of the toad can no longer furnish an excuse for the contempt and dislike with which he is almost universally regarded. The blemishes of a friend, says an old philosopher, are comely to the eye of affection.

There is, perhaps, no other of man's animal contemporaries that has been the object of so many baseless calumnies and superstitious notions as the toad. He has been denounced as a poisoner of children with his breath, as a producer of warts on all hands that touch or approach him, as a bringer of untimely rain; as a wanderer of the brute world who cannot die, though imprisoned for ages in solid rock; as a natural magician, carrying a necromantic stone in his head with which mystical cures can be performed.

This last is referred to in Shakespeare's line: "The toad, ugly and venomous, wears yet a precious jewel in his head." Dr. Brewer, in his "Dictionary of Phrase and Fable," quotes an old English writer as saying: "There is to be found in the heads of all old and great toads a stone they call borax, or stelon, which, being used as rings, gives forewarning against venom."

These fabled toad-stones, for no naturalist of today will grant that any such thing really exists, were said to bear always a figure resembling a toad on their surface, and it was believed that a touch of a toadstone cured the bites of venomous animals. In a collection of antiquities at Londesborough there is a silver ring with a reputed toad-stone set in it, and the legend connected with this ring avers that the stone "sweats" and changes color when any poison is brought near it.

But, while most of these strange beliefs have only a fanciful foundation, that which concerns the remarkable longevity of the toad and its ability to resist starvation and close confinement derives a little support from scientific experiments. In 1777 M. Herrisant imbedded three toads in plaster, and placed them for safekeeping in the archives of the French Academy of Sciences. After eighteen months, when the plaster was broken open, two of them were still living. The English geologist, William Buckland, immured a number of toads in cavities in sandstone and limestone. Those in the sandstone were found dead after thirteen months, while those shut up in limestone lived nearly two years. Popular stories of toads jumping out of rocks that have been blasted open, and in which they must have been enclosed for centuries, are common, but scientifically unauthenticated. Still, there is no doubt that toads are long-lived and very resistant to ordinary causes of death other than violence.

One fact which gives them a certain title to human sympathy is that they are great lovers of home. Where they were born they stay, if they can. Mr. A. H. Kirkland of Boston, who is one of the chief champions of the toad as a useful animal, says that he has convincing evidence that two toads have occupied dooryards in two different towns for twelve and twenty-three years respectively.

But now for the evidence that the toad is really an ally of man in his war against noxious insects. This depends entirely upon examinations shown by inspection of the stomach. They are decidedly "carnivorous," since no less than 98 per cent. of their food is of animal origin and consists mostly of insects noxious to man.

It remains to tell how he gets them, since most of them are alert and lively fellows. The secret of his success is in his tongue, which is long, and, what is even more to the purpose, is hung at the inner instead of the outer end. Consequently it acts like a lasso, which he flings with lightning speed and unerring aim.

Sampling the Landscape

Never had the engine run better. The huge car raced along the road raising the dust in clouds, and flitting past milestones with an easy regularity almost monotonous.

"Ah," gasped the driver, as the car battled with the wind which swept the high ground, whence for miles around the surrounding country could be seen, "this is the place for view—eh, my boy? Have you ever come across such a landscape as that before?"

Almost lost in the roaring of the wind came his friend's hoarse grumble.

"Never. I've already had a good deal more than I can swallow."

Resinol
cleared away every pimple!

At least once a day—usually twice—I bathed my face for several minutes with plenty of Resinol Soap and hot water and applied a little Resinol Ointment very gently. I let this stay on for ten minutes or so, and then washed it off with Resinol Soap and more hot water, finishing with a dash of cold water to close the pores.

I was astonished how quickly the healing Resinol medication soothed and cleansed the pores, and left my complexion clear, velvety, and free from pimples.

Physicians have also used Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap for 20 years in the treatment of itching, burning skin-eruptions. Sold by all druggists; for trial free, write to Dept. 15-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

Cadum Ointment causes pimples to dry up and fall off, leaving the skin soft, smooth and clear.

Pimples are a disease of the skin, and are not caused by bad blood, as many people suppose. Cadum Ointment helps these annoying and disfiguring facial blemishes because it can be applied direct to the trouble, and its soothing, antiseptic and healing powers stop the itching at once. Cadum Ointment is equally good for rash, blotches, scaly skin, chafings, eczema, sores, eruptions, acne, psoriasis, etc. 10c. and 25c. per box at all druggists.

This prescription for the removal of freckles was written by a prominent physician and is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by any of the Riker-Jaynes Drug Stores, or any druggist, under guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

NEW HAMPSHIRE INQUIRY ON THE B. & M.

CONCORD, N. H., July 9.—The Public Service Commission will next Tuesday begin a sweeping investigation into alleged attempts by the Boston & Maine Railroad to influence legislation in this State. The coming inquiry has aroused the interests of the entire State, and particularly of the members of the Legislature.

The Boston & Maine attorneys have until tomorrow to file a list of expenditures by the railroad since 1912 for counsel, for advertising, for publicity, "for any purpose tending to influence legislation."

The investigation is the result of a resolution passed by the New Hampshire House of Representatives on the final day of the last session. This resolve, however, did not get before the Senate. But just the same the Public Service Commission is going ahead with the inquiry.

The resolve was introduced in the House by Charles W. Tobey, Progressive, of Temple. Representative Tobey claimed that the same men who got certain railroad funds, as disclosed in an inquiry last year at Washington, were active for the Boston & Maine interests in the big reorganization fight last Spring.

It is expected that witnesses are to be heard by the commission, and there are rumors that sensational revelations will be forthcoming.

Lime Starvation Causes Tuberculosis

In the Medical Record (New York) of December 18, 1909, Dr. John F. Russell says: "The condition which is recognized as preceding the active development of tuberculosis in the adult may be considered as due to lime starvation. * Among inorganic substances lime salts appear to be of special physiological importance, * but if the salts are not in organic combination, it is difficult to suppose that the cells can appropriate them for food."

Years of widespread use confirm our belief that the success of Eckman's Alterative in tuberculosis is due largely to its content of lime, in such combination with other valuable ingredients as to be easily appropriated by the cells.

Doubtless this has had much to do with the results in many cases which appear to have yielded to it. As it contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, it is safe to try. Sold by all Riker Drug Stores and leading druggists.

B. & M. Train Is Twice Held Up By Washouts

ROCHESTER, N. H., July 9.—After being stopped by a landslide at Woodland, a hundred passengers on a Boston & Maine train on the Dover-Lakeport branch narrowly missed a second mishap at West Alton where the locomotive was stopped on the brink of a washout. That there was not a wreck was due to Charles Hatch, a section foreman who planted a "torpedo" in time to warn the train of danger. The passengers were marooned several hours.

Because of the swollen rivers due to the rain, several big mills here and in nearby places were forced to shut down today. The Isinglass bridge here was moved from an abutment with a damage estimated at $5,000.

At North Rochester there is a washout 500 feet long and 14 feet deep.

Austria Apologizes for Wilson Attack

By International News Service.

VIENNA, via Berlin and Amsterdam, July 9.—The Austrian government today apologized to Frederic C. Penfield, the American Ambassador, because the Neue Wiener Tageblatt printed an attack upon President Wilson and the United States because of the American protest against Germany's submarine warfare. The apology was made after Mr. Penfield had inquired whether the newspaper voiced the opinion of the government. In addition to disclaiming that such was the fact, the government warned the censor that no such articles could appear in the future.

BOSTON TRAIN IS DITCHED BY STORM

The lives of 100 people, passengers on the Green Mountain Flyer, were saved by the quick action of the conductor, who, feeling the track give way between Troy, N. H., and Webb, stopped the train and ordered them out into the rain.

A moment later the last three cars sank through the water-soaked roadbed, down a forty-foot embankment into the river.

The news of the miraculous escape of the passengers was received early today when the passengers arrived at the North Station at 2:30 a. m. nearly seven hours late.

TRACKS GAVE WAY.

The train, consisting mostly of Pullmans, well filled with passengers, had been creeping along weakened roadbeds. Although due in Boston at 7:40 p. m. its passengers arrived only at 2:30 a. m. today. At 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon the train had just left Troy, N. H.

As it crawled along a forty-foot embankment, edging a river, which ordinarily is a gentle little stream, but which swollen by the downpour into a raging torrent, Conductor A. W. Keenan felt an unusual motion of the car in which he was riding.

He immediately gave the bell signal to the engineer to stop the train. Before it had come to a full stop he was bundling the passengers out into the rain, driving them out, regardless of protests.

Hardly had the last passenger stumbled out, when the roadbed settled. The terrified passengers saw a great section of track cave down into the torrent forty feet below, carrying the last three cars of the train with it.

PASSENGER COLLAPSES.

One passenger, with a weak heart was so terrified that he collapsed and required medical attendance. The rest waited until extra cars were sent from Winchendon. A wrecking train sent out from Keene, N. H., was held up before it reached the flyer, by a washout, which put over eight miles of track out of commission.

Floods, landslides and washouts resulting from the tremendous downpour of rain throughout New England disrupted railroad schedules, shut down mills and lighting plants, created havoc with shipping and caused a damage amounting to thousands of dollars, according to reports which came in today.

All New England suffered. Cloudbursts inundated towns. Rivers boiled over their banks. Dams washed out. Whole railroad divisions were tied up by washouts. Heavy damage was caused growing crops. The rainfall set a new record high mark for July, of 7.48 inches as against 6.86 inches for the whole month of July, 1881, the best previous record since the Boston Weather Bureau was established.

The first report of a disaster at sea was that of the destruction of five barges of a string of ten owned by the Eastern Dredging Company, bound from Boston to Portland. The fleet encountered the first signs of trouble off Gloucester. The tow line parted, setting the last five barges adrift.

One piled up on the historic reef of Norman's Woe. The other four were scattered along the rocks from Magnolia to Beverly. Fortunately the crews of the barges had been taken off by the tug when it became apparent that the storm was becoming dangerous. The tug managed to make Gloucester Harbor with the other five barges.

BOSTON DRENCHED.

Although the worst damage was reported from up country, Boston and suburbs did not escape. Cellars were flooded, roofs weakened, and great damage caused in the outlying suburbs. The street car service between Woburn and Lexington was cut off by the streams of sand washed over the tracks.

Lowlying streets in Lexington were flooded by the overflowing of the Concord river. The Shawsheen was also up, spreading out over a large territory of low lands.

The Hoosac river, higher than in years, surged out of bounds at Hartwellville, Vermont, flooding the streets of the town. The Kilcare Lake, an artificial pond on the big estate of W. B. Plunkett, the cotton manufacturer, burst its bounds and roared through the streets of the town.

At North Adams the river swelled up across the lowlands, tearing out factory walls, sweeping away bridges and plunging the city in darkness by flooding the dynamo room of the city's lighting plant. The flood washed down the main streets a foot deep.

HOOSAC TUNNEL BLOCKED.

A huge landslide, loosened by the steady rain, dropped down across the tracks at the west portal of the Hoosac Tunnel. Gangs of wreckers were hurried through the tunnel and succeeded in opening the line after several hours hard work.

At Mount Whittier, on the Conway branch, all traffic was tied up until emergency crews could repair the roadbed. The New York train due in Keene, N. H. was held up on account of the washouts.

Yarmouth, Maine, was reported under water. There the family of Mrs. Susan Dunphy was rescued from their marooned home in boats. The public library was reported flooded.

At Claremont, N. H., the Tyler dam, forming the reservoir which supplies water to the town, went out. It swept down Bible Hill, carrying the Bible bridge and several roads and washing away great sections of roadbed of the street car line.

Several washouts were reported at Lakeport, N. H., where five or six sections of track settled with the undermining of the embankment along which they were laid.

The last two cars of the St. John express were caught at Greenland, N. H. by the Drake's bridge landslide. So effectually were the cars bedded in, that the train had to be cut and these cars abandoned.

'No Unneutral Acts,' Says Sayville Head

NEW YORK, July 9.—Herman A. DEMAND REAL STORY OF HOW HOLT MET HIS DEATH IN JAIL

NEW YORK, July 9—Increasing public suspicion in Nassau county of the brief official statement that Frank Holt, later identified as Erich Muenter, the Capitol dynamiter and Morgan assassin, jumped to his death in Mineola jail blazed forth today into a general demand that Governor Whitman order a full investigation of the Holt mystery and of affairs at the jail generally.

The question now raised—especially by a new statement from Jerry Ryan, the jail guard—include the following:

Did Holt die from a bullet? [illegible] was first told Holt shot himself.

Was any other person [illegible] Holt concerned in the killing [illegible] Commissioner Woods was reported [illegible] wired Washington that night [illegible] bullet WAS FIRED FROM OUTSIDE THE PRISON.

In the confusion at the jail immediately following the discovery of Holt's body last Tuesday night questions like these were heard: "Where did he get it?" and "Who gave it to him?" Were these references to a weapon?

PUTTY-FILLED HOLE.

Was a round, putty-filled hole [illegible] on Holt's forehead caused by a bullet? Reporters and others who saw the body have declared it was more like a bullet hole than anything else. Ryan says there was no such wound or mark in that portion [illegible] on Holt when he arrived at the jail.

Why has the principal exhibit in the mystery, the body [illegible], been released from the local authorities by being shipped to Texas for burial even before the inquest?

Why was an expert pathologist not called in to examine the body? This was repeatedly suggested to the county officials.

Why does [illegible] revolver [illegible] four old [illegible] and one new shiny one? Ryan [illegible] the death [illegible] there is no significance in the one new bullet and that [illegible] for two years.

Why are [illegible] inquest witnesses been allowed to leave the county? Warden William Hulse of Mineola jail has suddenly started for the Adirondacks on his vacation. Sheriff S. P. Pettit has gone to the Elks' convention at Los Angeles.

WHO SOUGHT HIS DEATH?

[illegible] Holt's lips sealed. He had said he would tell the [illegible] explosives Wednesday morning.

Was a weapon smuggled in to Holt? Ryan says there were a lot of jail visitors Tuesday. It would not have been difficult for someone to slip a revolver to Holt.

If Holt shot himself, what became of the weapon?

These are the chief of innumerable questions which are now being hurled [illegible]

Stress [illegible] on the fact that the Mineola jail [illegible] last Tuesday night [illegible] criminal of the [illegible] who had tried to blow up the Capitol, who had pumped [illegible] bullets into J. But he [illegible] dead, apparently [illegible] easily as the most casual down and out [illegible] jump off a dock.

RYAN'S NEW STORY.

A long statement by Jerry Ryan was one of the leading developments today. Ryan said:

"I have never [illegible] that Holt jumped to death and that he [illegible] I [illegible] that the noise I heard when I was out of the corridor for a moment or two was not the sound of a pistol or an explosion of some kind.

MINNEHAHA IS SAFE IN PORT AT HALIFAX

By International News Service.

NEW YORK, July 9.—Creeping [illegible] heavy fog that made navigation difficult the British liner Minnehaha entered Halifax Harbor [illegible] this afternoon, according to [illegible]. Her arrival there ended [illegible] miles that began Wednesday when an explosion on board [illegible] started a fire and forced Captain Claret to turn toward Halifax and [illegible] his voyage to England with [illegible] of ammunition [illegible]

[illegible] part of the [illegible] mile run was made at full speed while the crew fought and gained control over the fire in the hold, but nearing the coast the liner ran into a severe storm that compelled Captain Claret to slow her down.

GRAVE ANXIETY.

Lack of direct news from the Minnehaha during the early hours had [illegible] grave apprehension at the A. [illegible] Transport offices.

[illegible] boats left Halifax early today to meet the Minnehaha and because of the ammunition aboard she was not permitted to dock there. The fire was investigated by the [illegible] authorities in the stream and no one was allowed to board the vessel without special permit from the Admiralty authorities.

An effort was made to learn whether the fire really was started by a bomb planted by Holt.

In Holt's warning letter he said that he thought the bomb would be on either the Philadelphia or the Saxonia because they were scheduled to sail July 3. The Minnehaha was to have sailed July 3, but delayed until Sunday, the day following.

On account of Holt's uncertainty as to which ship would receive the bomb it is believed now that the explosive was concealed as part of a freight shipment due to leave on some steamer sailing Saturday last.

Although the Minnehaha sailed from the same deck as that used by the Philadelphia, the belief now is that the careful guard maintained on the piers would have made it impossible for him to have personally placed the bomb in a ship's hold.

The waybills of all shipments and the manifest tallies are being investigated to try to account for every piece of freight billed aboard which might have been shipped by either of the three ships.

Although most of the Minnehaha's cargo consists of high power explosives the bulk of these are said by the agents of the steamship company to be stored in the hold aft. The No. 3 hold in which the fire was reported is believed to be far enough forward from the explosives to lessen slightly the chances of the fire or heat of the fire detonating the dangerous part of the cargo.

DANGEROUS CARGO.

The Minnehaha's manifest showed the following shipments of high explosives:

[illegible] cases of loaded shrapnel shells.

[illegible] cases of loaded cartridges.

1,000 cases of cordite.

1,400 cases of trinitrotuluol (This is [illegible] of great force, which goes into high explosive shells.)

[illegible] barrels of lubricating oil.

[illegible] cases of rifles.

[illegible] cases of empty projectiles.

[illegible] firearms.

[illegible] spelter.

880 cases and bundles of brass rods and sheets.

432 motor trucks.

1 Ford motor ambulance.

1,500 bales of cotton duck, which goes into the manufacture of khaki uniforms.

230 live horses.

830 kegs of horse shoes.

20 bales of absorbent cotton, 10 barrels of salacylic acid, 95 barrels of boracic acid and 83 boxes of formaldehyde.

Eighteen cases of auto parts.

One hundred cases of magnetos.

Six cases of fuses.

Eighty bundles of copper wire.

Thirty-four plates of zinc.

Ten crates of air guns.

In addition, the cargo included 24,461 bushels of Canadian wheat, 10,000 cases of canned and frozen meat, 12,000 barrels of flour, 66 hogsheads of rum, and 5,000 boxes of cheese.

Other items of the manifest include eggs, wax, and many kinds of dairy products.

Aboard the Minnehaha are 1[illegible]8 men. There are no passengers.

Federal authorities and the police are anxiously awaiting the complete report of the captain of the Minnehaha to learn definitely whether the fire on the liner was caused by a bomb explosion or by the explosion of ammunition. If caused by a bomb, this will confirm their belief that Dynamiter Holt was responsible.

In the meantime a search is being made for a man who drove Holt on three occasions to the Syosset freight station for explosives and on another occasion was seen with him on a train.

The police say this chauffeur is a man of heavy build with sandy hair and a florid complexion and that he is believed to have an intimate knowledge of the motives inspiring Holt in his crimes and of the persons who supplied Holt with sufficient money to carry out his plans.

They are handicapped by having neither the number of his automobile nor any clews as to the locality in which the chauffeur lives.

Several officials at police headquarters are still going through a mass of correspondence and notes found in Holt's rooms at Ithaca, N. Y., in hope of discovering something concerning the dead man's early history.

[illegible] Prof. Ernst Elster of Marburg University, Amsterdam, who lectured last year at Cornell, declared today, according to despatches, that Frank Holt [illegible] America and [illegible] never been [illegible] He became acquainted with Holt at Cornell, and thought him "rather queer."

VILLA'S DEPLETED ARMY IN RETREAT

SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS By A.H.C. Mitchell

ONE reason why the Red Sox stand the best chance of [illegible] the American League flag is because they have more games to play than the White Sox and Tigers. Another reason is that they have lost less games than either the Chicago or Detroit Clubs.

[illegible] pennant as the Red Sox [illegible] fighting now, [illegible] games lost more than [illegible] games won. A team up in front as the Red Sox [illegible] naturally win more games than they lose. [illegible] from [illegible] the Boston team [illegible] having lost less games than either of the other two there is [illegible] percentage [illegible] may be called a percentage [illegible] conditions that exist in favor of the Red Sox.

LATELY the Red Sox pitchers have been [illegible] Some of these were largely in the nature of gifts [illegible] Joe Wood [illegible] first game Wednesday after [illegible] had established [illegible] big [illegible]

LEONARD showed on Wednesday that he is back to old-time form [illegible] best work of any against the Senators. Two hits in the first inning [illegible] of the American League [illegible] Ban Johnson circuit.

IF the Detroit pitchers can hold up [illegible] show signs of weakness.

IT is a peculiar thing that a [illegible] Sherwood Magee [illegible] always been up among the leaders should have an off season at this time [illegible] when a player who is dissatisfied with his berth on one club is transferred to another the change acts like a tonic. But in Magee's case his batting eye has gone back on him for the time being. Tris Speaker of the Red Sox, who can be depended upon to hit for considerably over 300 year after year. Magee started off poorly this season. But Speaker [illegible] to life a few days ago and his batting average has been [illegible] up by leaps and bounds. Perhaps Magee will follow suit. If he does, it will mean a lot to the Braves.

FIELDER JONES, who resigned the management of the St. Louis Feds a few days ago because he couldn't stand the rotten umpiring in that organization, has reconsidered, as it was expected he would do and is again ahead of the team.

The resignation did not surprise anyone familiar with baseball history. When Jones was managing the Chicago White Sox he was in constant broils [illegible] the officials and was sent to the club house nearly as often as Griffith and McGraw used to be. But both Griffith and McGraw have reformed to a large extent. They are seldom canned by the umpire these days.

IT is reported from New York that [illegible] Ward, secretary of the [illegible] League, [illegible] who own the Brooklyn [illegible] League club [illegible] are [illegible] large extent the Colonial League for $10,000 in cash [illegible] that [illegible] Fed [illegible] would blow up unless the money was forthcoming. Walter S. Ward [illegible] admitted that he came to the rescue with [illegible] part of the amount asked [illegible] by Ward. "There is no [illegible] for the Colonial League to consider," declared Mr. Ward.

Self-Pity Kills Fighting Instinct

It never pays to act the baby, either in a fight or a frolic. The only time Jess Willard did it very nearly dashed his championship hopes.

"Don't ever feel sorry for yourself," the world's champion advises in the installment of his autobiography which will be found in the AMERICAN tomorrow. "Self-pity kills the fighting instinct. It makes a fellow willing to quit because it gives him a good excuse for quitting."

That's good, sound doctrine. And it applies to anything a person does—business, sport, everything.

Of course, you are reading this autobiography every week day in the AMERICAN.

RED SOX START DETROIT SERIES

DETROIT, Mich., July 9.—Full of pepper and fight, the Red Sox rolled into this city early today eager to get at the Tigers on the ball field. The Tigers were equally eager to meet the "Speed Boys" from the East, so it is generally taken for granted that fur will fly at the ball park when the series opens this afternoon.

The splendid record of Carrigan's team in recent games is sufficient notification to all opposing teams that they are a bunch that is not to be trifled with. The great pitching they have enjoyed of late also shows opponents that they will have to work their hardest to overcome the Red Sox.

Carrigan was asked this morning to name his probable pitcher and he replied that he expected to start Ray Collins against the Tigers. He added that Foster and Ruth were also available, or for that matter every pitcher on his staff was ready to work except Wood and Leonard who pitched in the double header at Boston on Wednesday.

The reporters could not get Carrigan to make any extravagant claims as to what his team would do to the Tigers. All he would say was "We're ready for em."

Great interest [illegible] here over the visit of the Red Sox and if the weather holds good there will be a large outpouring of Detroit fans to witness the series. The Tigers are in their place [illegible] the Chicago and Boston [illegible] Jennings and his [illegible] can trim the Red Sox [illegible] they will [illegible] It is a grand race [illegible] leading teams [illegible] starts today [illegible] bearing in deciding the [illegible] of the fact that the [illegible] half over.

The Red Sox expect [illegible] in the [illegible] was never beaten [illegible] until the Tigers [illegible] last month. Then [illegible] to him. They now [illegible] they did before.

It is a good bet [illegible] of the White Sox [illegible] scoreboard [illegible] Boston-Detroit series [illegible] a case of [illegible] both the Tigers [illegible] them in the race for the flag.

25 Free Trips TO THE World's Series

UP! UP! UP!

The climbing Red Sox are doing all in their power to make the AMERICAN'S World's Series Contest a doubly interesting one this year for the twenty-five fortunate fans who succeed in capturing the free trips to the games.

For with either the Red Sox or the Braves as one of the contenders in the 1915 World's Championship, the baseball battles—always intensely thrilling—will be doubly so because of the loyal interest in the home team.

And not only will the twenty-five fans who win enjoy seats in a special reserved section at all of the games, but they will travel from city to city, wherever the games are played, in DE LUXE style on a special Pullman train with all the comforts and conveniences that such a statement means.

They will stop at the best hotels in each city and will be able to enjoy the delights of what will probably amount to over a week of continuous pleasure with all expenses paid by the Boston AMERICAN.

Any fan who is not a contestant in the AMERICAN'S great battle of votes can at least help some brother fan to win this splendid victory and enjoy the DE LUXE trips from city to city.

Clip the coupon on Page 2 and vote it today for some good friend of yours whom you would like to see earn one of the FREE trips.

It does not matter whether he is already entered in the race or not. If he is he needs your vote. If not your vote will start him on the road to victory.

Vote that coupon now while you are thinking of it and "do your little bit" to give some dyed-in-the-wool rooter the baseball treat so dear to the heart of every real fan—a reserved seat at each and every World's Series game.

You, or some friend of yours, will want to be there when the Red Sox are fighting it out—so get busy.

HITTING A LOST ART WITH OUR BOYS--EVERS

"We ain't hitting, so we ain't winning. One or two timely hits would have turned practically every one of those defeats on our disastrous trip into a victory. Hit? Why it's a lost art on our club."

So remarked Johnny Evers, the eminent Keystone King, at the Copley Square Hotel today.

"We didn't hit; that's all there is to it. We got great pitching and our fielding wasn't half bad. But we didn't hit."

"How's Bill James?"

"Fine! Bill never looked better at any stage of the 1914 campaign than he did the five innings he worked against the Dodgers Wednesday. But over on the Polo Grounds he didn't have a thing. Say, he pitched like us fellows are hitting. Honest, it didn't seem as if Bill would ever be right again. But Bill had the McGrawites eating out of his hand with a slow ball.

"In Brooklyn Wednesday Bill was at his best. Stallings left him in New York when we came home so the doctor who is working on him could complete his job. Bill will join us in about a week and ought to be a regular winner the rest of the route.

"Davis looked like a million dollars winding up that long game for James. Say, we really did some hitting off Douglas, but I guess the Brooklyn scribes wanted to make Phil's game look good, so they only gave us four blows. I'm sure we pasted out ten. I see where Cutshaw was given two tough errors. Why, they were hits, not miscues, even if I'm the guy the scorers robbed. Davis should be a lot of help to us if we ever start hitting."

STALLINGS LOST WEIGHT.

Where Stallings is lighter by fully twenty pounds than when last seen around his old haunts in Boston, as a result of the long run of doleful defeats, Evers seems completely fagged out, though saying that he never felt better in his life. The Trojan doesn't look the part; that's positive.

"No, Joe Shannon, one of our red-headed twins, did not lose Tyler's game for him in Brooklyn," says the Trojan. "That ball that got away from him and spilled the beans took a false hop. Joe got his hands on everything he had a chance to clutch. Honestly, Speaker couldn't have covered any more ground than Joe, and it was tough that ball didn't bound true.

EVERS STILL LAME.

"I'm still a little lame, but set to stick it out and help get the bunch started. Just let our pitchers keep up their good work and we will commence to climb. Honestly, we will set the old league on fire if we only start hitting."

MANY PROMISING LOCAL RING MEN

By JACK CONWAY.

A NUMBER of promising young local boxers have been "discovered" since the Atlas A. A. season opened in April. Many aspirants for ring honors have received an opportunity to battle at the Arena this year. The majority of them have only displayed fair form, but a few of the youngsters possess an abundance of natural fighting ability and have bright ring features.

Larry Burns of Lawrence, "Belgium" Brown, the Gloucester boxer, and Howard McRea, the Cambridge flash, are the best of the new crop of glove men.

Burns is a lightweight. He was fighting featherweight a few years ago, but he has taken on weight and is now a regular 133-135-pound boxer. The Lawrence youth is one of the most promising lightweights that the writer has seen in action for a long time. He is a splendid boxer while he is very aggressive and is able to land a stinging blow with each hand. Burns, of course, has still a great deal to learn about the fine points of the ring game, but if he is handled properly he should soon be "up there" battling with the leading men of his weight in these parts.

"BELGIUM" BROWN also looks real good. He is a welterweight and has been winning his bouts with great regularity. He has won from Joe Eagan, Joe Farren, Mickey McIntyre and "Young" Jasper, while he held "Wild Bill" Flemming to a draw. Johnny O'Rourke is manager of Brown. When O'Rourke took charge of Brown, the latter was a poor fourth-rater. Today he is up and coming and wants a match with Mike Glover. If he keeps on winning he will be in a position to force the South Boston star to agree to meet him.

HOWARD McRAE is not as big as either Burns or Brown. He's a featherweight and a great one, too. This "kid" is as fast as lightning on his fett and is able to punch harder than the average young man of his weight. He moves in and out with wonderful precision. He boxes along the same lines which have won international fame for Freddy Welsh and Johnny Kilbane. He may also be a champion some day. Who knows?

CHARLEY WHITE is working out at Rye Beach, New York, for his twelve-round tussle with "Young" Saylor, which will be staged at the Atlas A. A. next Tuesday night. The Chicago boxer was not damaged in his contest with Freddy Welsh in New York last Saturday night and should be at his best when he crawls through the ropes of the Atlas ring.

The majority of experts who witnessed the White-Welsh fight, are not a bit bashful in asserting that Nate Lewis' champion had the best of the going. White forced the fighting in the majority of the rounds and landed many more effective punches than Welsh. The title holder did a great deal of holding and was a tired young man when the bell sounded at the end of the final round according to Boston "fans" who occupied ringside seats close to Welsh's corner.

SOUND BODIES

By JULIAN HAWTHORNE

This is the seventeenth of a series articles on "Sound Bodies" written exclusively for the Boston AMERICAN by Julian Hawthorne. These articles will be continued in the AMERICAN on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

Loosening-up exercise, designed to prepare the body for more strenuous exercises.

This exercise is merely the reverse of the preceding one.

Stand erect, with your arms down at each side.

Now imagine that there is a bucket, with a rope handle, which you are gripping with the right hand. This bucket is filled with water, or with lead or gold, if you like, and it is your business to hoist it up a few inches.

Of course, you might lift it up pretty far, if you were allowed, by the rules, to turn your right elbow outward, and lift it up by the strength of the shoulder-muscle—the deltoid. But nothing of that kind can be tolerated.

The right arm must remain in contact with the right side and the right elbow must not be bent at all.

The lifting must be done by an upward movement of the whole right shoulder and, at the same time by a backward bend of the body, affecting the left side of the back above the hip. It is a perfectly natural movement; you could raise up the bucket in no other way if you were precluded from bending the elbow or from letting the arm lose contact with your side.

The movement will counteract the squeeze that was administered to your liver by the preceding exercise and will stretch out the muscles on the right side of the body, above the hip, to the utmost. The liver will be glad of the relief, no doubt, for no liver could stand being squeezed all the time.

After having completed the movement on the right side, do the same thing on the left and repeat ten times on each side. Make that bucket as heavy as you can so that you will feel the strain across the back of your shoulders, down the back of the arm (triceps), and in the breast muscle (pectoral).

The hand on the side you are exercising will slide upward from its natural position about halfway down your thigh to nearly the height of the hip bone in front. The left hand, meanwhile, will drop downward nearly to the level of the knee.

The exercises which I have thus far described, and all in the same series that are to follow, are mere loosening-up exercises, designed to prepare your body and limbs for the real athletic exercises outdoors which we may consider hereafter. They will search out and strengthen the weak places in your body and fortify them against danger of strain in athletics. And what is more important, they will give your insides a thorough shaking up and put them in the healthy and vigorous condition which athletic exercise requires. quires.

These are exercises which anybody can perform with safety, and that is why I describe them so minutely and recommend them to everyone. But I would not venture to recommend energetic outdoor athletics to everyone except after thorough preparatory training in these extension movements.

A certain musician had a pupil whom he instructed in practising the scales and in nothing else. After some ten years of scales exclusively the pupil made bold to enquire if he might not hope some time to attempt a real piece of music.

"My boy," replied the instructor, "your practice of the scales has no doubt been tedious, but the result has been that you are now qualified to play at sight any piece of music ever written."

I am not going to keep you ten years at these little exercises; but you see the point?

SPRINTERS HERE FOR REVERE RACES

Al Goullet, the Australian sprint champion, who broke the worlds record for five miles at Newark this week, will make his season's debut at the Revere Cycle Track tomorrow night, when he tackles Marcel Dupuy, the speedy Frenchman, in a special sprint match.

Three other riders will also make their first local appearance of the Summer in the 25-mile motor-paced race, which, with the big sprint event, forms a double feature bill for tomorrow evening.

The competitors in the paced race will be Bobby Walthour of Atlanta, Ga., Percy Lawrence of San Francisco, Worth Mitten of Davenport, Ia., and "Pinkie" Turville, the Revere youngster who is making rapid strides in the professional bike world.

Walthour was billed to race here some few weeks ago, but an eleventh hour injury necessitated a postponement. The Georgia Peach is showing swell form. Pacemaker Carl Ruden took him out for a spin at the beach oval the other afternoon and remarked afterwards that he was surprised at the speed the veteran showed.

VANITIE MEETS RESOLUTE IN FOURTH RACE

By H. C. THOMAS.

Today the cup boats Resolute and Vanitie will meet in the fourth race of this Summer's series at Oyster Bay, Long Island Sound.

The Sewanhaka-Corinthian Yacht club will have charge of this race, and has offered a very valuable cup for the winner.

Under the present management the Vanitie is sailing fast, and Cornelius Vanderbilt, who last Summer owned a share in the Resolute, has shown considerable skill in handling the Gardner boat. The new rig of the Vanitie has also given her more speed.

The races thus far this season have been better tests of the respective qualities of the two boats than the entire nineteen of last year.

The races last year developed the fact that to be a good sailor one must be able to peer through a heavy fog bank and pick up an imaginary starting line.

In about every race last Summer fog was right on the job, while the wind took a vacation.

This Summer, thus far, has been very liberal in providing good weather conditions. The last two races have been rather favorable to the Resolute, but the Vanitie picked off one of the races, and did this right in the Resolutes own weather.

Nat Herreshoff, who has designed more cup defenders than any other man living, is sailing on the Resolute and is wearing sort of a troubled expression at present.

The races thus far has developed the fact that the Vanitie is a pretty speedy proposition under any conditions, and with the skill of those on her deck to get all the speed possible out of the boat, the chances of the Resolute going down the line this Summer in a walkover are pretty slim.

Mr. Herreshoff's knowledge about sail fitting is being shown in every race. This knowledge, coupled with the fact that "Charlie" Adams is a little more on the job than Vanderbilt, when it comes to getting a start, gives the Resolute about all the advantage there is between the big 75-footers.

If no accidents occur, the Vanitie and Resolute will come to Marblehead in August in the pink of condition, and then the yachtsmen will have a chance to see the favorite skipper of Boston pitted against one of the cleverest amateurs New York has produced in some years.

NEW 'L' RATINGS DENIED BY BOARD

Elevated employes today are discussing the refusal of the arbitration board to create new classifications of shop employes in an interpretation of a section of the award of the board, ratified last December.

The decision asserts that the question of whether or not employes of the Boston Elevated Railway Company in a lower paid class are entitled to the rate of pay of a higher paid clas if they are doing the same character of work as men in that class, cannot be reopened before May 1, 1916.

One of the contentions of the union men is that many of the men in the new jobs are working at a lower rating of pay than men doing practically the same work under a different classification with a higher rating. The board found that an arbitration of the differences between the men and company depended on an interpretation of one of the sections of the original award.

The issues were submitted some time ago to the original board of arbitration, consisting of Mr. Storrow, James H. Vahey and James L. Richards, for a ruling.

In reply the board says:

"Our conclusion is that this whole question of classification was raised in the arbitration proceedings and definitely determined in the award resulting from these proceedings, and that the question cannot properly or fairly be reopened before the expiration of the period for which the original award was made effective, namely, not prior to May 1, 1916."

In a statement Mr. Vahey, who represents the men, says:

"The chairman of the board of arbitration is not to blame for these conditions. He decided the classification issue upon the evidence before him at the time the award was made, and I have joined in the award because there does not seem to be any answer to the logic of the chairman's decision. He has spent much time in the determination of the question submitted to him, and in my judgment has decided it with characteristic honesty and fairness."

JUDGE GARY SEES SUDDEN END OF WAR

SAN FRANCISCO, July 9.—In a speech delivered at a dinner in his honor by the Commercial Club of San Francisco, Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the Board of Directors of the United States Steel Corporation, predicted an unexpectedly quick ending of the European war. He added that peace would bring about an unprecedented prosperity for the United States. Judge Gary said, in part:

"Much has transpired during the last few years in the United States and throughout the world to make the business man despondent. Investment has hesitated. Prosperity has diminished.

"Idle men and idle utilities for the production of wealth have been unusually large in number. Conditions have been unnatural and deplorable.

"It is not proposed to speak in terms of reproach. It is more agreeable to consider the possibilities of the future.

"We have been living upon hope for improvement and now have well grounded reasons for expectations.

SEES WAR'S END NEAR.

"We are approaching the end of a war that has been and still is destroying life and property almost beyond human calculation. The end may not come immediately, but it will come sooner than expected by many, including some of those who are most actively participating.

"The appalling and daily increasing losses in life and in property to each of the belligerents cannot be long endured by any of them. Already there are signs of fatigue.

"There is obtainable proof that all countries involved deeply regret that the war was ever started. They are nearing exhaustion. They are sick at heart. We shall at no distant day see peace secured.

"There will be provided a permanent tribunal for the adjudication by arbitration of all international differences and the enforcement of its decrees by the nations not directly connected.

"These results will be brought about by the masses of the people. They did not precipitate the war, but they will end it and insist upon measures to prevent a recurrence.

"Americans probably cannot be of much service in this direction at the present time, whatever their inclinations.

"Throughout our own land we are to have industrial peace, and as a consequence greater prosperity than ever before.

"Success in business has again become popular. Those who attack or obstruct legitimate thrift will be given a seat upon the toboggan.

SIGNS OF PROSPERITY.

"If I read aright the signs of the times, we may look forward with confidence to marked improvement in business results, perhaps not so soon or so rapid as we could wish, but as certain and as satisfactory as the disposition and the action of the majority of the people themselves will permit.

"With its great and increasing wealth, its natural resources, its productive capacity, its location, and with a well defined and settled policy to foster and encourage its industries, who can measure the future natural growth and strength of the United States?

"We have the opportunity to become the leading nation of the world—financially, commercially and industrially. Every diligent, honest and worthy member of the community may prosper if he really wishes, and there will be no room for the vicious or for the demagogue."

In the first month of the war, when many persons predicted an early decision, Judge Gary wrote that there could be no decisive result under a year and a half. He also wrote that the first year of war would cost the belligerents fifteen thousand million dollars. No other expert or statistician anticipated such colossal expenditures. Judge Gary's figures have proved to be right. His forte is his judgment, which is said to be almost unerring.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKET

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks opened strong, although many people believed gloomy reports from Washington as to the German reply to President Wilson on submarine warfare and assumed that when the Kaiser's proposals are published there will be a crisis in this country's international affairs. Not only was the market tone good at the outset, but prices soon reached a higher level, showing how difficult it is to estimate the trend under the present unprecedented conditions. The government crop report of yesterday was regarded as favorable. In fact, as the season advances faith becomes stronger that at a time when the yield will be the most valuable this country is going to reap an immense agricultural harvest. One of the chief questions is what is to be the extent and duration of foreign liquidation of American securities. It will not last as long as has been feared, if the estimate is correct that what Europeans now possess in stocks and bonds issued on this side of the Atlantic does not exceed $2,000,000,000. If the war lasts much longer this country is likely to get out of debt to Europe and become a great creditor to that part of the world.

EARLY GAINS FRACTIONAL.

Most of the early gains were fractional, but there were not many active issues which failed to go up. Fifteen minutes after the opening in New York advances included Amalgamated ¾, Utah ⅝, Anaconda ⅝, American Smelting ⅞, American Can ⅛, U. S. Steel ½, Bethlehem 2¼, Baldwin ⅝, Goodrich ⅝, Studebaker ⅞, Westinghouse ⅝, Baltimore & Ohio ⅞, Canadian Pacific 1½, N. Y. Central ⅝, New Haven ¾, Northern Pacific ½, Southern Pacific ½, St. Paul ½, Union Pacific ⅞ and Louisville & Nashville ½. Rails had more support as a class at the start, although Missouri Pacific and "Katy" touched new low prices. "Mop" was off ½ and "Katy" ½ for common and ⅜ on for preferred. Reading was off ½. There was a much larger demand for all kinds of stocks at the opening. At the end of half an hour there had been a reaction and New Haven was 2 below yesterday's closing figure and 2¼ below its opening price today.

ZINCS UP IN BOSTON.

Zinc issues were higher in Boston, Butte & Superior advancing ¼ and American Zinc ⅜. But U. S. Smelting was especially active. It was also weak, declining ¾. Trading in coppers was quiet, but some of them made gains, including Mohawk, ex-dividend, 1 and Greene-Cananea ⅛. United Fruit was up ⅜ and Alaska Gold was off ⅛. A number of important issues were unchanged.

There was nothing new concerning the metal market early today.

In New York in the last half of the first hour the list was irregular and the reaction more pronounced.

Woman Surprises Burglar at Work

The Medford police today are searching for the burglar who stole two watches from the residence of Mrs. Nellie Follette, No. 613 Fellsway, and who might have taken more loot had he not been interrupted.

Sounds heard by Mrs. Follette led her to make an investigation. In doing so she frightened away a burglar who was examining the valuables in her sleeping room, and thereby saved most of her jewelry.

The thief got away with two gold watches, one of which is the property of Mrs. George Anderson of New York, a guest at Mrs. Follette's home, and with a handbag containing $6 in cash and some other articles. He entered the room by removing the screen from one of the windows.

Mrs. Follette was entertaining some friends at dinner at the time and did not hear him until the party had left the dining room for the parlor. The thief leaped from the window just as she entered the room, leaving behind a pearl necklace, some pearl beads, a diamond ring, other jewelry and some valuable silverware.

LID OFF AGAIN AT NEWPORT CLUB

NEWPORT, R. I., July 9.—With the house as clean and bright as a new silver dollar and with the spacious grounds carefully groomed, the Nautilus Club on Bath road, just around the corner from Bellevue avenue, opened this week for business.

The place in its golden days was once owned and run by the late Dick Canfield, but now, according to the tax book, the estate is owned by David W. Bucklin and W. S. Coe. Its taxed valuation is $21,600 but it cost a great deal more than this sum.

The Nautilus Club leads a charmed life and has been immune from raids and the confiscation of its gambling outfit. Thus far it looks like an open gambling season for Newport.

'GARDEN TRUCK' IN MARKET CHEAP

A plentiful supply of produce and garden truck was the feature of the markets today, and this big supply, coupled with light purchases, has driven prices down to a remarkably low level.

With the incoming of fresh berries next week, the housewife who plans to do any preserving has an opportunity offered her. Currants were selling yesterday, for instance, at 11 cents at the stands, 3 cents for the jobber.

Marshfield strawberries have dropped to 15 cents.

Salmon and green peas are in order, with salmon of the best at 20 cents, and peas at 4, 5 and 6 cents a quart.

Mackerel is cheap; while even brook trout is down to 75 cents a pound.

New potatoes are beginning to pour into the market, and prices to drop.

New corn is available, but only at a high price level and in the fancy shops.

Delaware apples have arrived. A quotation of $1.50 a bushel was the rule yesterday.

Pineapples are cheaper. Fresh hennery eggs are 35 cents, and butter is from 30 to 35 cents a pound.

MOTOR NOTES

By J. C. KERRISON.

J. W. Maguire and party and J. H. MacAlman and friends returned yesterday from a pleasant trip through New Hampshire, during which time they visited Bretton Woods, Franconia Notch and Maplewood.

A. G. Batchelder, chairman of the executive committee of the A. A. A., is suffering from painful, although not serious, injuries he recently experienced in an automobile accident in New Jersey.

J. G. Roe, formerly publicity manager of the Hupp Motor Car Company of Detroit, has been promoted to a responsible position in the service department of that company.

The Noyes-Buick Company, wholesale distributors of Buick cars in New England, has placed a retail agency covering Sharon, Stoughton, Randolph, Canton, Avon and Holbrook with F. P. Millard of the Millard garage, Sharon. Mr. Millard is one of the best known dealers in that section of the country and will hereafter devote his entire time to the handling of Buick cars.

In order fitly to celebrate the victory recently achieved by his Boston company, Manager J. S. Hathaway of the White Company is to hold an old-fashioned Duxbury clambake at his Summer home at Marshfield next Sunday. The members of his organization will leave Boston early in the morning going over the road in White cars. After the arrival the party will engage in golf, tennis, horseback or any other sport desired, and a really good time is anticipated. In sending out his invitations Mr. Hathaway says: "Do not forget your bathing suits. The beach censor requires from shoulder to knee."

OUR FIRST DUTY IS TO MAINTAIN PEACE; OUR NEXT DUTY IS TO PREPARE FOR WAR

A Referendum Really Worth While

THE purpose of the National Chamber of Commerce to take a referendum vote of its membership upon the worth of the La Follette Seaman's law sounds more important than it really is.

The National Chamber of Commerce is essentially a federation of a great number of the commercial bodies in the United States. Its pronouncements are the concentrated essence of ultra-conservatism, the reactionary, strictly commercial sentiment in our principal cities.

Few people take such proclamations seriously. Even those who join in making them toss off their votes or their opinons in a perfunctory way in the intervals of business, knowing that they express the sentiments of their class, and quite unwilling to give themselves the trouble of making any deeper investigation into the matter than enough to satisfy themselves that they are in accord with their kind.

We have no desire to decry the worth of these commercial bodies, nor to underestimate the public spirit of the successful and really eminent men who make up a great part of their membership. But as the AMERICAN remarked once before in this fight for the re-establishment of the merchant marine, the chambers of commerce are always more ready to denounce any new and seemingly radical effort to accomplish an end universally denied than they are to suggest any constructive action.

We are frank to admit our doubt as to the operation of the La Follette law. Designed to rectify crying abuses by which American seamen have suffered cruelly, it seems likely to so limit the number of American ships that there will be little employment for our seamen at all. Intended to perfect the provisions for the safety of passengers in ships using American ports, there is danger that its provisions will prove so greatly in violation of our international obligations that they will be set aside, leaving that vital matter in worse case than at first.

Already it is apparent that on the Pacific coast two very considerable lines of American ships will shift their flags rather than comply with the provisions of this law. Andrew Furuseth, whose long fight for the law has compelled admiration, as his rugged integrity compels respect, dismisses this action of the Pacific Mail and the Dollar Line as "mere bluff," but it is difficult to follow him that far.

The AMERICAN apprehends that the La Follette law will be but one more evidence of the hostility of this administration to the American merchant marine. Beginning with the Panama Tolls bill, continuing with the annulment of the Underwood preferential tariff clause, and culminating in the surrender to the Shipping Trust on the government-owned merchant marine, the administration has dealt the nation's hopes for a revived merchant marine a series of deadly thrusts.

We know in advance what the referendum of the National Chamber of Commerce will ordain on the subject of the La Follette law. Why not break away from hide-bound conservatism and inquire: "Does the Wilson adminstration really want the American flag replaced on the high seas?"

How CAN the War Stop?

A Few Things to Think About Before You Predict Early Peace

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

Of the fifteen hundred millions of human beings on this earth, every one that can read is asking: "When do you think this war will stop?"

The question is not, When will it stop, but how can it stop?

Germany has shown a marvelous power and energy unknown to the history of the human race thus far. She is fighting four great nations—and not one of them has a foot upon her soil.

How can you expect Germany to stop when all the fighting is done on foreign lands and she believes that she is in the right?

And how can you expect the others to stop, also believing that they are in the right?

As the situation stands, nobody can end the war but Germany for a long time. And Germany can only end the war by giving in. And do you imagine that she will do that?

Suppose that Russia should have enough and say to Germany, "I am through, no more fight in me." That would not end the war. Italy, France and England would say to Russia, "You may be through, but we are not through. We are going on fighting."

Suppose that Italy said—which she will not say—"I made a mistake getting into this thing, I want to get out." And suppose she stopped fighting. That would not end the war. England and France would still say, "We are not done."

Suppose Russia, France and Italy, all three, said that they had enough of war. That would not end the war, for England would say:

"Stop if you like, but I will not stop. I am safe on my island. I can deal with a few Zeppelins for years to come: Send a hundred Zeppelins every day and they will not kill as many people as consumption.

"I am going to fight Germany because I am able to do it by strangling her commerce.

"Germany is at war and Germany will be hungry as long as I close the oceans to her commerce. And I can keep them closed."

There are a few things to think about when anybody asks you, "When will the war end?"

For a very long time the war cannot end unless Germany decides to end it. Of the powers at war, the Germans—in which word we include Austria and the German Empire—alone can put an end to the conflict.

The other nations are bound by a solemn vow not to make peace separately. Solemn vows amount to but little in war. But even if one or two or three gave in as we have suggested, England, with the great majority of her men safe at home, separated by the protecting strip of water, could cross the ocean with her fleets, could keep German commerce bottled up and carry on a war of years.

If Germany could make peace with Italy, France and Russia, and if the terms of peace could include an agreement by those nations to unite their navies with the navy of Germany in fighting England, that might be a different story, and peace might be forced. But that is not exactly likely to happen.

If the wild beasts in a cage go to tearing each other to pieces, you need not be told that they will keep on fighting until loss of blood ends the battle. Unfortunately, the war in Europe is simply a war of wild beasts in a cage, each declaring that the other started the battle, each determined to fight until blood and weakness end the contest.

Let us at least KEEP OUT OF THE CAGE.

Weather's been too warm lately for water-wagoning around in the dust, so Captain Bryan takes the jolly H^2O for a cruise. His crew doesn't appear altogether happy, but their bluff old skipper is too busy laying mines to notice that. No; we can't tell you if he cackles after laying a mine, as the man with the harpoon might charge us with nature faking. It's no joke to have the harpoon thrown into you. If you don't believe us, ask the whale. Do not fail to notice the gallant sea-dog, Josephus Daniels. Now that he has put a laundry aboard each battleship, he faces the future unafraid, knowing that any time our sailors are torpedoed they'll go skywards in clean shirts.

P. S.—Hasn't that plank floating around there got an awful lot of nails in it!

All Hope Is Prayer---Faith Gives It Wings

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

"I AM writing to ask you if you are really a true believer in prayer. All my life I have believed in God, and have always prayed to Him to help me over the rough places. But my prayers are never answered. I have just struggled along from year to year. I am 28 years of age now and I am tired, tired of life, tired of everything in life. I have been trying for weeks to keep from ending it all, for the burden is now more than mortal mind can stand. I got married a short time ago and came to New York (my husband and I) to try to get employment of any kind. We do domestic work and for months have been unable to secure work of any kind. We owe several weeks' room rent and are sometimes hungry in this big city, and have to help my poor old mother at home with her room rent, that is also overdue. Now, why should one live a life of this worry year after year, with not one gleam of hope for better days? I married to try to help matters a little and it would have, but everything is against us and I am tired, tired and want to end it all. Would I be doing very wrong?

"DISTRACTED."

The writer of this article does most implicitly and most emphatically believe in prayer.

All hope is prayer; who calls it hope, no more, sends prayer footsore forth over weary wastes: while he who calls it prayer gives wings to hope.

Some one has said:

> "Prayer is the simplest form of > speech that infant lips can try,
> Prayer the simplest strains that > reach the Majesty on high."

Prayer is more than all this: it is a higher and subtler form of power than electricity. All thought is a kind of electric force; and just as electricity possesses lighting, warming and healing power, and again a destructive power, so all thought is either constructive or destructive. Prayer is intensified thought, and when sent out from an earnest mind it reaches the invisible wireless wave lines which fill space, and its message is somewhere received and recorded.

We are surrounded by Invisible Helpers, guardians and guides who are appointed by the Great Creator to look after the various orders of beings who inhabit His spheres. When we ignore these great truths, we cut off the communication with the Invisible Helpers to a large extent. When we pray we bring them near again.

There is an interesting story told by John Wesley, the celebrated divine. He was riding through a dark wood, carrying with him a large sum of money which had been intrusted to his keeping. A sudden sense of fear possessed him, and he dismounted from his horse, and offered up a fervent prayer for protection. Years afterward he was called to see a dying man; this man narrated to him the incident above mentioned, and said he had been lying in the woods waiting to rob him of the money he carried. He told Wesley how he noticed him descend from the horse, and how, on his resuming his journey, the appearance of an armed attendant riding beside him had filled the robber with awe, and caused him to abandon his project.

Without doubt the intensity of Mr. Wesley's prayer had materialized the form of his Invisible Helper, who came to protect him. Prayer should always be accompanied by work. Each morning on rising there should be an earnest prayer for light and guidance and strength to perform the duties and tasks which lie nearest us. Then we should go forth AND FAITHFULLY PERFORM THOSE TASKS AND DUTIES.

The writer of the pathetic letter given above should keep on praying and she should believe that in herself lies the power to achieve success and to overcome all the obstacles which seem to fill her path. She has evidently allowed her mind to become clogged with morbid and despondent ideas. They dominate her mental kingdom to such an extent that her prayers are crippled.

Every thought of self-destruction puts her just so much farther away from the Invisible Helpers, and makes the attainment of her desires just so much more difficult. Were she to attempt to destroy her life she would find it impossible. The body can be destroyed, but life goes on very much the same as here, only on another plane.

He who knocks shall find doors opening. He who asks shall eventually receive.

Be not impatient in delay,
But wait as one who understands,
When spirit rises and commands,
The gods are ready to obey.

Julian Hawthorne
